Uncle Sam's Last Words
Pegging Our Dollar
Why Pay Six Billions?
Two Ford Anniversaries
—By Arthur Brisbane

FRANCE REFUSES to pay anything; Poland refuses to pay anything; England, instead of $75,000,000, will pay $10,000,000, in silver, and get credit for 50 cents an ounce, although silver is worth only 35 cents. And that is the grand total of our grand foreign debt collecting enterprise.

Uncle Sam must remind himself of the criminal standing on the gallows with the rope around his neck; asked if he had anything to say, and replying, "Yes, I want to say that this will be a lesson to me as long as I live."

Europe, "very sorry," can't pay what she owes, but is generous with good advice, especially concerning our own money.

Foreign countries will fix a price at which our dollar shall be "pegged" compared with the British pound, and we are quite docile about it.

Meanwhile, England is accumulating more gold and France adds constantly to her supply.

England's gold reserve has risen to one hundred and eighty-eight million, two hundred and forty-five thousand pounds. A good deal of gold.

France has three billion, two hundred and forty-four million dollars' worth of gold in her vaults. These figures help you to understand why those countries cannot pay Uncle Sam what they owe. If they did pay, they wouldn't have as much gold.

Late yesterday afternoon dispatches from London announced that a "pact" had "pegged" the dollar at 64 cents.

If the dollar is worth 64 cents, how much is one cent worth? "No decided how many cents the dollar is worth, how was the deciding done?

The French government, by its own action, cut 80 per cent from the value of its franc, cutting it down from a little less than 20 cents to a little less than 4 cents. That made it easy to pay off the French internal debt, and to pay Englishmen that bought French "franc bonds" at the old price.

Americans will ask why it is necessary for Europe to fix the value of the American dollar. We had an idea that that value would be fixed by the value of things that the American dollar can buy.

The United States is about to spend three billion dollars on public works for employment, will pay workers, contractors in currency, and those buying the bonds that it is proposed to issue will all be paid in UNITED STATES CURRENCY.

That currency will bear the government's name, and be just as good as government bonds, which also will have "the government's name" on them.

Why the government should insist on issuing bonds and paying interest for the pleasure of using its own currency to pay its own bills may be plain to the wizards of "high finance," but it is a profound puzzle to the average American.

If the country issues three billions of bonds and pays 4 per cent interest for a period of seventeen and a half years, it will have to pay six billion dollars, principal and interest, to get three billion dollars' worth of work done.

High finance tells you, "It is necessary to issue bonds and pay interest to keep the government's credit good."

Does it help the government's credit to pay out six billions, loading that weight on the backs of taxpayers, instead of paying three billions in currency, as the work progresses, and retiring that currency without interest, just as the bonds would be retired?

Today Henry Ford's motor company is 30 years old. This is also the 40th anniversary of the day when Henry Ford first interested himself in building a gas engine. He says, "I made my first gas engine in 1893, and it still runs."

Henry Ford has made and sold more than 21,000,000 Ford cars, but he says, "The past does not especially concern me; my real task is still ahead."

More power to him.

Next Sunday will be "Father's Day." A more appropriate day might be the first of the month when father signs checks.

Advertisements advise loving children to give father presents of all kinds, from hats to ties, neckties to garters, 3.2 beer to cigars.

The best present is something that father can use or wear. Whatever it is, it will be a surprise.

An electric light bulb containing "a small amount of Neon gas and metallic sodium" is said to multiply visibility by 16, and to be "the future lamp for lighting highways, and for automobile lights."

The new bulbs cast no sharp shadows, and are said to provide three or four times more light with the same amount of electricity.

"GIFT FAMILY" SENTENCES DELAYED TO TUESDAY

Sentencing of Mrs. Florence C. Hascall, her son, Coburn Woodbury, and Miss Hazel B. Leland, for conspiracy to steal in connection with the Gift Family investment scheme, was postponed today by Judge Collins in Middlesex Superior Court, to Tuesday at 4 o'clock. This was done because Asst. Dist.-Atty. Frank G. Volpe, who prosecuted the case, was unavoidably absent.

CZECHS TO PAY PART OF U. S. DEBT

THREE JUDGES OVERRULE LOWELL

Harry Thaw Case Cited; Court Orders Negro Back to Virginia

The U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals today reversed the decision of Judge James A. Lowell of the Federal District Court and ordered George Crawford, colored, alleged slayer of two women, sent back to Virginia for trial.

Counsel for Crawford will apply for a writ of certiorari to carry the case to the U. S. Supreme Court immediately.

Judge Lowell had ordered Crawford freed on the ground that the Virginia murder indictment was void because Negroes were not picked for grand jury service.

THAW CASE CITED

His decision had aroused a storm of protest in the south and efforts were made in Congress to impeach him.

The Circuit Court, while finding that Judge Lowell erred, states nevertheless that discrimination against Negroes in picking grand juries is a violation of the 14th Amendment of the Constitution.

The decision of the Circuit Court cites the case of Harry Thaw, slayer of Stanford White, who escaped from Matteawan Insane Asylum in New York and battled against extradition from New Hampshire. The Supreme Court ordered him returned.

The appeal court rules in the Crawford case that the place for Crawford to wage his fight against the method of picking grand jurors in Virginia is in the Virginia court at his trial. Then he can carry his fight to the United States courts on certiorari proceedings.

CIRCUIT COURT ORDER

There is no censure for Judge Lowell in the decision handed down today by Judges Bingham, Wilson and Morton of the circuit court.

In conclusion they state:

"Our conclusion is that the dis-

'ESCAPE KING' IN MAD DASH FOR LIBERTY

233-Pound Fugitive Is Pulled Heels First Out of Pipe

George B. Murray, 28, of Broadway, Cambridge, threw House of Correction and East Cambridge court officers into an uproar today when he made a spectacular attempt to escape through a sewer and steam pipe tunnel leading from the House of Correction to a manhole on Spring st.

If Murray, who weighs 235 pounds, had been less weighty, his attempt might have been successful.

He was transferred to East Cambridge from Concord today to serve out six more months of a five-year sentence for larceny. He was observed attempting to remove a screen from a fourth-floor window by Officer Peter McNeil.

When McNeil started after him, Murray ran down another stairway and dove into the pipe tunnel while McNeil ran to spread the alarm.

Special Sheriff McElroy had all manholes in the neighborhood into which the tunnel led, guarded.

Meanwhile Officer Paul Olsen went into the tunnel after Murray.

He found Murray, near collapse from the heat and foul air in the tunnel, under a manhole on Spring st.

With great difficulty he dragged Murray back through the tunnel by the heels.

Murray, known as the "escape king," successfully broke away from Deer Island in August, 1931, but was later recaptured.

He successfully broke jail in Michigan, and has at least a half-dozen other near-successful breaks to his credit.

WHAT 'UNBIDDEN GUEST' SAW IF SHE WERE THERE

While guests and attendants waited nervously and curiously for they knew not what, Miss Hester Swain of Winchester became the bride of Hancock Dorr today in the Church of the Advent, Back Bay. Miss Swain and her father, C. B. Swain, wealthy lumberman, had sought an injunction to bar the girl's mother, divorced, from the church, but the writ was denied. If the mother attended—and several acquaintances said she did—she saw her daughter march up the aisle. (Boston American photo.) (Story on Page 3.)

SISTERS HEAR PLEAS FOR 2 IN SOLOMON KILLING

Defense Begins a Last Fight to Save Trio From Death Chair

While his sister and the sister of John T. O'Donnell listened—their lips quivering with emotion—the life of Frank Karlonas was pleaded for today in Superior Court during the first of defence final arguments in the Solomon murder case.

The plea for Karlonas' life came a little more than twoh ours after Karlonas, on trial with O'Donnell and John J. Burke for the murder and armed robbery of Charles "King" Solomon, had branded himself on the witness stand as a liar and a coward.

At 11:05 a. m. the defense rested and after an hour of rebuttal and vain argument of defense counsel on various motions, Atty. Francis J. Monahan, counsel for Karlonas, launched into the first of the defense's final arguments.

FATE TO JURY TOMORROW

With three defence aguments to be made and one for the government, and with the charge of Judge Raoul Beaudreau to the jury to follow, it was ordained that the case could not be given to the jury before tomorrow.

Atty. Monahan, in his argument, criticized the prosecution for failing to call as witnesses the two girls who had been with Solomon in the Cotton Club on the murder date, Jan. 24, and Joe Solomon, former orchestra leader at Coconut Grove, who owned the "King" Solomon, who also was in the party.

"I am making a plea for the life of a boy," said Atty. Monahan, "and in a way I am as much interested as he is. The state demands that boy's life, and on what premise? On a charge of gunfight conspiracy to rob and murder.

The state claims that there was a common conspiracy among six young men to rob and murder Solomon. I claim that the charge of conspiracy is preposterous. It is not supported by a group of evidence. The government has not offered one bit of evidence that Karlonas robbed robbed Charles Solomon or was a party to the robbery, or that Karlonas alone killed Solomon—and so far as that is concerned, the proposition is entirely out.

President Joins Wife in Boston Tomorrow

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, as refreshing as a cool breeze and just as much "on the move," came into Boston today, smilingly acknowledged a surprise welcome by a large crowd at South Station, and motored to Groton to attend the graduation of her son, Franklin, Jr.

With her the tall and gracious First Lady brought her daughter, Mrs. Anna Curtis Dall, and the good news that the President, apparently never in better health, will himself be in Boston tomorrow.

In summer costumes, in which the "Eleanor blue" was the dominating shade, Mrs. Roosevelt and her daughter stepped from the Federal express, from Washington, at 8:10 o'clock this morning.

She was met by her son James, still clutching a doughnut snatched from a hasty breakfast. With him was Col. Edward W. Starling, head of the secret service. But there was a crowd of 500 as well, to applaud and cheer.

James greeted his mother and sister warmly. Word already had spread through the station that the First Lady was in and the crowd jammed the gate entrance and the platform.

Mrs. Roosevelt picked out her own luggage and designated the porter to carry it. With her son and daughter, and Col. Starling she walked down the platform and across the concourse to a waiting White House automobile in several bursts of handclapping.

The White House mistress smiled continuously. Her smile is becoming quite as famous as her husband's. She was quite obviously pleased by the unexpected welcome.

Her party went immediately to the Hotel Statler where, in a private dining room, they breakfasted.

BIAS CHARGED IN BANK CASE

Charge that Atty. Robert T. Bushnell had waged a campaign to "poison the mind" of Charles W. Blood, as master, was made today in Supreme Court by Atty. George H. Lucey in the $1,000,000 suit against directors of the closed Medford Trust Co.

Lucey was arguing before Justice Crosby on motions to recommit Blood's final report of the master's hearing for further findings.

In his argument, Lucey declared that Bushnell, during the master's hearing, constantly referred to Edwin T. McKnight's connection with the closed Fidelity Trust Co. when the other Medford Trust directors had nothing to do with that bank.

"This reference," said Lucey, "was insidently carried on during the hearing—a constant poisoning of the mind of the master."

SEA MASS FLIGHT REAL AVIATION AID, SAYS BALBO

SOLO HOPS OF LITTLE VALUE, ITALIAN AIRMAN HOLDS

General Italo Balbo, Italy's flying Minister of Aviation, is writing exclusively for Universal Service the full story of Italy's newest daring aerial adventure—the formation flight of hydroairplanes from Orbetello, near Rome, across the North Atlantic to the Chicago Century of Progress Exposition. He will tell the story in four dramatic articles, of which this is the first. General Balbo's own story of the flight will appear in this city exclusively in the Boston Evening American.

By GEN. ITALO BALBO.

Italian Minister of Air and Commander-in-Chief of Rome-to-Chicago Squadron Flight.

(World copyright, including South America, 1933, by Universal Service, Inc. All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or in part prohibited.)

By Special Cable.

ORBETELLO AIR BASE, Rome, June 17—The idea of the present flight was born at Rio de Janeiro two years after completion of the Italy-to-Brazil flight when Premier Mussolini, in his message, announced the greater aerial enterprise of the tenth year of the Fascist Revolution.

In 1929, being in the United States on the occasion of the Chicago Aeronautical Exposition, held from December 1 to 9, 1928, I had proposed to study the possibilities of a mass flight from Europe to North America, but I convinced myself that the time was premature.

After the triumphal message from Premier Mussolini, received at Rio de Janeiro, I conceived the plan of crossing the globe from Italy by way of India, Japan, the Aleutian islands, Alaska, Mexico, Panama, New York to Ireland, and thence to Rome. I sent one of my best officers to study the situation at the Aleutian Islands, one of the most difficult zones of the trip. Later, on account of the long war between China and Japan, which would have rendered inefficacious a winged embassy of peace and progress throughout the world, I had to abandon this idea.

On the other hand, the European and world crisis, which had become everywhere more acute, was being felt also in Italy. It was necessary to study a less costly flight. The following year, in 1932, an Italy-to-United States flight was decided upon, which would bring about, for the few bases to be organized and for not having to change motors, a much lesser expenditure of energies and means.

For more than two years, that is to say since 1930, the school of navigation of Orbetello, in which studies and experiences for collective flying over the high seas are concentrated, has been functioning.

GIGANTIC AIR STRIDES

We admire the individual crossings and "exploits" of great aviators, but we consider them superseded by the necessities of time and by progress. The Atlantic is crossed today also by tourist planes. From this repetition and each attempt no lesson and no demonstration not already known are derived.

Innovation can only come from transportation in a mass of planes from one continent to another across oceans. Aviation units like navies can confront the problem of transportation by entire squadrons. Italy, with the Atlantic flight from Roma to Brazil, has given proof of these possibilities.

I maintain that by means of this aviation policy, which I effected for the first time in the world, aviation can accomplish gigantic strides in all directions—for progress of machines, for training navigators and for meteorological organizations, mathematical and technical, which are still too insufficient.

The type of plane selected by me for the actual crossing is the same as that used for the South American flight. The hydroairplane has been subjected to many performances which have made it without doubt the best in the world. The S-55X Savoia-Marchetti has both greater control and greater speed than the preceding machine. A thoroughly proven Italian motor, the "Act 750," an Isotta Fraschini, has been installed in the plane.

VETERANS FEW

Following our aviation policy, I have selected all the crews, not from among the aces and not according to exceptional titles, but keeping in mind best points gained by each one in the unite, both for qualities for officers and for experience in flight. The major part of the participants in this flight come from land planes. Only one part of the personnel is formed by veteran pilots of Atlantic hydroairplane flying. In total, the crew aggregates 100 men.

Each plane carries a first and second pilot, a radio telegraphist, and a mechanic. In my plane there is the technical officer of the Orbetello school, who will suggest to the other planes by radio, in case of emergency, remedies to be taken in urgently for any material trouble that develops.

In other hydroairplanes three reserve officers travel to provide for every doubtful eventuality.

OVER NORTH ATLANTIC

I have selected for the first part of the crossing the route of the North Atlantic because it is richest on the protected points between Europe and North America.

Our stops are Amsterdam, Holland; Londonderry, Ireland; Reykjavik, Iceland; Sandwich Bay, Labrador; Shediac, N. B.; Montreal and Chicago.

The first leg of this trip is hard because it includes crossing the Alps and Europe, a difficult voyage for hydroairplanes. From Londonderry to Reykjavik, and from Reykjavik to Labrador one invariably encounters fog. Our planes are provided with all the most modern instruments for flying in fog and the pilots are very well trained in blind flying, but we propose to avoid fog banks for hundreds and hundreds of kilometers to avoid the peril of formation of ice on our wings.

For this service we obtained the services of six whaling boats distributed between Iceland, Greenland and Labrador. Aboard them we have placed our own officers and Italian scientific experts with the necessary instruments for meteorological and aerological readings.

FLIGHT TRIBUTE TO U. S.

I think that, technically, it is not possible to do more than we have done for organization of an aerial enterprise of this kind.

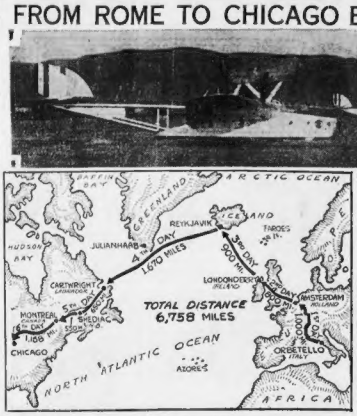
We are attempting to go to America with a squadron of 24 large hydroairplanes. It is a military squadron that is accomplishing a civilian mission. We believe that we have to our credit, after the work already accomplished, a sufficient percentage of success.

I have said we are attempting to go to America. In case of exceptionally contrary atmospheric conditions, rather than take mad risks, I am determined to order the squadron to return to Italy.

On our tricolor wings we bring the salute of Italy to the great people of the United States at the moment in which all civilized countries are preparing definite resolution of the grave problems left as an inheritance from the World War.

(Gen. Balbo will further describe the flight to this country in following articles.)

FROM ROME TO CHICAGO BY SEAPLANE



ITINERARY MAPPED BY BALBO FOR FORMATION HOP

As messengers of good will, Italy is sending 24 great flying ships in a mass flight from Rome's seaplane base, Orbetello, to Chicago's Century of Progress Exposition. In command of the Isotta-Fraschini-powered fleet is Air Minister Gen. Italo Balbo, whose story of the air epic begins on this page. Bad flying weather over the Alps delayed start of the squadron today. (International News Photos.)

GEN. ITALO BALBO

Weather Blocks Hop of Italians to U. S.

Orbetello, Italy, June 16 (INS)—Still another delay in the mass flight of Italian seaplanes to Chicago was caused today by reports of poor weather over the Alps.

The flight, which was to have begun at 6 a. m. today, was postponed until probably Sunday.

Reports from the North said clouds, fog and poor visibility obtained over the Alps, making attempts to fly over them too dangerous to be attempted.

ROOSEVELT NOW FACES USE OF POWERS FROM CONGRESS

Washington, June 16 (AP)—Triumphant in Congress as no recent President has been, Franklin D. Roosevelt faces now on his own the real test of his power to pull the country out of its slump.

The legislative session which ended this morning has given him all the implements he asked to combat deflation, unemployment, debt burdens and the myriad interlocked causes of depression.

The men who are to translate into action the many daring, new activities of government are at their posts.

The President himself, after weeks of intensive preparation, planned to leave immediately on vacation, confident that his machine is set to do the job.

BILLS TO BE SIGNED

A few final acts on his part were required today to get the whole thing rolling. The National Recovery Act, industrial control and public works legislation, had to be signed and its executives formally given their appointments. The railroad regulation bill also needed the Roosevelt name to become law, and so did Senator Glass' bank reform act.

But the Recovery Act administrator, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, with a corps of aids, was prepared to go on big job employing one million men—and on linking industry together in a wide chain of voluntary control agreements to lift prices and keep down production, share jobs among extra millions and raise wages.

Under the Economy act, the President was given power to reduce veterans' compensation and government salaries at an estimated saving of over a half billion dollars. The administration estimates that the deductions made, and those to come, will be about $1,000,000,000.

BUDGET ALMOST BALANCED

Through the Economy act and the revenue expected from beer, the latest administration figures are that the budget for the next fiscal year will lack only about $120,000,000 of meeting expenditures.

At the Department of Agriculture, Secretary Wallace and George N. Peek, the farm relief administrator, were set to curtail production of wheat and cotton by withdrawing millions of acres from production, paying farmers to leave land idle and charging the cost to the finished product. Formal announcement of the plan was looked for today.

Soon to be in motion is to be the revitalizing of the great Muscle Shoals plan, electric power plant the government hopes to run as a model of efficiency to set the pace for private industry. With it will go first steps of the Tennessee River development, which, like the Civilian Conservation Corps, is a project personally dear to the President.

More fateful and possibly determinant of the success of these purely domestic enterprises, a delegation at London is struggling for world monetary stabilization and cut-down tariff walls, that world trade may flow again, and the Treasury and Federal Reserve Board are operating the key policy of controlled inflation.

MORE INVESTIGATIONS

Already the goldless currency and cautious inflationary steps have helped to boost farm prices, wages and employment by heartening fractions, but nothing yet is clinched.

All rests on the successful execution of the Roosevelt adventure in statecraft.

The adjourning of Congress also set in motion a round dozen of investigations to be carried on during the coming months, most notable that in which the whole structure of federal tax law is to be restudied.

The ways and means committee of the House will do this job, inspired by disclosures of the Morgan investigation.

Congress Passed 1 P.C. of 8100 Bills

Washington, June 16 (AP)—Congress' batting average for bills passed during the special session was just one per cent.

Eighty-one of the approximately 8100 bills introduced were passed by both houses. Thirty-five of that number originated in the Senate.

Ten joint resolutions were passed.

Approximately 2000 bills went into the Senate's hopper, while 6000 were introduced by Representatives.

Congress Is Lauded by Pres. Roosevelt

Washington, June 16—President Roosevelt today sent his appreciation to Congress for its "wholehearted co-operation" in identical letters to Vice-President Garner and Speaker Rainey, read early today in the Senate and House. The text in part.

"Before adjournment, I want to convey to you an expression of my thanks for unstinted support on the broad average a more sincere and more whole-hearted co-operation between the legislative and executive branches of the United States government than has been witnessed by the American people in many a long year.

"This spirit of team-work has in most cases transcended party lines. It has taken cognizance of a crisis in the affairs of our nation and of the world.

"It has grasped the need of a new approach to problems both new and old. It has proven that our form of government can rise to an emergency and can carry through a broad program in record time.

"I am certain that the American people are appreciative of the work of this session of the 73d Congress."

N. Y. Society Leader Goes Under Knife

New York, June 16 (INS)—Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, social leader, today was recovering from a minor operation performed last night.

"Mrs. Whitney has undergone a minor operation. She is doing nicely," Mrs. Stevens Heckscher, of Philadelphia, mother of the society beauty, announced.

Dodge Children Guarded; Plot Feared

New York, June 16—His two children closely guarded against kidnapers, Horace E. Dodge, Jr., son of the late auto manufacturer, returned from England.

H. E. Dodge, Jr.

The children, David, 3, and Diana, 1, both of whom were born on the Dodge estate in England, came ashore with their mother and two nursemaids, half an hour after the ship docked yesterday. A private bodyguard surrounded them. Asked if he had received any kidnap threats, Dodge said:

"No, but I believe in taking no chances."

Lady Astor Meets Wales in Title Golf

London, June 16—The Prince of Wales and Lady Astor are scheduled to meet in the semi-final round of the British Parliamentary golf championship on Walton Heath.

Lady Astor

Today the American born Peeress was the favorite in the gossip of the House of Commons smoking room. If not her golf, which has it's moments, her vivacious wit has the majority of bettors mainlained, will carry her through to the final. She won the privilege of meeting her future monarch, her defeated opponents ever, by talking them out of the game.

Office Romance Ends in Wedding

Wedding bells will replace the clicking of a telegraph instrument tomorrow for two fellow workers of the Western Union when Miss Anna M. Waters of Woodford st., Dorchester, becomes the bride of John J. McCoy, jr., of Marine rd., South Boston, at St. Paul's Church, Hartford st., Dorchester.

The couple met at their employment in the main office of the Western Union in Congress st.

20 MILLION PIECES OF SILVER FOR U. S. PACIFY PARLEY, SAYS WALKER

James J. Walker, former mayor of New York, engaged by International News Service to report the World Economic Conference, today continues his description of the proceedings.

By JAMES J. "JIMMY" WALKER

Copyright, 1933, by International News Service.

Geological Museum, London, June 16 (INS)—There is peace in the peace conference today, but yesterday it looked as though it might be on the rocks. Twenty million pieces of silver saved the day.

Just twenty million ounces of silver, valued at 50 cents an ounce, and purchased by the British government from the government of India and deposited in the Bank of England in dear old Threadneedle street, earmarked "property of the United States federal Treasury," just as ninety-five and one-half millions in gold were deposited in the same place and gone way last December to meet the semi-annual payment of the debt due from England to the United States.

Jimmy Walker

Now we have some silver threads among the gold, because John Bull doesn't love us so much in June as he did in December.

Nevertheless, he didn't leave Uncle Sam without something to add to his souvenirs.

It was due-day—or rather, don't-pay-day for some. Italy and others did partially, but La Belle Frence seems still to turn a tin ear to our plea of "Sister, can you spare a dime?" for Monsieur Woodin's tin box.

Little Finland was the lone star she paid in full.

However, the cow is off the track. The tender by the debtor nations and the reply by President Roosevelt made it possible for the world's greatest conference to get down to the great things that were properly expected of it.

The high tension created by the constant references to the debts has given away to temporary relaxation at least. The persistent charge that nothing could be done until that subject was disposed of, coupled with the fact that the American representatives of a creditor nation had no authority or power to dispose of it, resulted in much confusion and threatened continuance of the conference.

And in spite of this fact there seemed to be fairly substantial agreement that (1) the general level of wholesale prices must be raised, (2) exchanges must be stabilized, (3) an international monetary standard should be restored as soon as practicable, (4) consistent with national economic systems, the channels of trade must be cleared.

However, with that subject removed, some progress was made as the steering committee decided upon the personnel of some subcommittees or commissions created to study a report on the above subjects.

There was one lively contest that gave the politicians an opportunity to practice their fine arts. The United States nominated Gov. Cox as its candidate for president of the finance commission; France insisted upon Georges Bonnet, minister of finance, for the same place.

It looked like a choice between an "on the gold standard" ticket and an "off the gold standard" ticket. But the well known ability of practical men to reach a compromise resulted in conceding the American the chairmanship and the Frenchman the job of rapporteur, which to you means master of ceremonies.

While the diplomatic plumbers were straightening out the Franco-American joint, T. V. Soong, Chinese finance minister, and, by the way, concededly one of the world's most astute students of finance, was accorded the floor.

And he evidently came prepared to meet the proposal of "Asia for the Asiatics," offered by a Japanese spokesman, by throwing down the pig-tail gauntlet and emphatically declaring that his country wouldn't support any doctrines of national and sectional isolation. And Manchuria is only 3000 miles away.

The Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, prime minister of Canada, also addressed the convention and won many earnest compliments. In his speech he said:

"The nations of the Americas have had relatively little experience in international affairs."

And it might be well for the people of the United States to keep this thought in mind.

It's an old story that our representatives are always taken for a ride when they cross the sea, and too frequently we find that they are no matches for foreign diplomats and statesmen. But sitting in the press gallery I am convinced it's a hard enough job to keep both eyes on the international prestidigitators without being obliged to dodge home-made shots that are fired at them.

It's high time we all pulled together to pull the American people out of their domestic misfortune. Over here they are eager to learn and quick to take advantage of American discord at home, but if the present administration is given united support its representatives will have the respect and influence that will enable them to insist on a fair deal for all countries, large and small.

NEEDHAM TILTS WITH COUNSEL FOR KENNETH

Ridicules Tale of How Peggy Was Kidnaped by a Rum-Runner

By JAMES J. SMITH
(Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent)

Barnstable, June 16—Brig.-Gen. Daniel Needham, state police head, and Elias Burwick, counsel for Kenneth Buck, blunted verbal swordpoints against each other today in a wordy dual at the trial of Buck and his brother, Cyril, for the kidnaping of 10-year-old Peggy McMath.

As one of the final witnesses for the state before Peggy is called to tell her own story, Needham had ridiculed Buck's tale that a "rum runner named Bill" had kidnaped Peggy.

BARES MIDNIGHT TRYST

He had told underr direct examination of s fear by William V. Lee, friend of Peggy's father, Neil C. McMath, that Peggy's younger brother, Francis, would be abducted, and of a strange tryst with Lee one midnight during the investigation when McMath arose from a place of concealment under the robes of an auto on the floor of the car.

"I had a feeling that I was going to be kidnaped myself," the police head had recounted with a smile.

Burwick began a rigorous cross-examination immediately after Needham had completed his story covering the police activities.

He admitted police had made no atempt to find the "rum-runner named Bill," but he said this was because they were sure he was non-existant.

ASKS ABOUT McMATH

Q.—Did you at any time lean over to Kenneth and ask him: "Is McMath connected with this kidnapping?" A. (loudly)—I never asked him that.

Q.—Did you ask him such a question and find that he refused to answer? A.—I did not.

Q.—You, as an attorney, knew you could consult financial agencies to determine the financial condition of McMath, didn't you? A.—es, I knew that.

Q.—But you didn't do it? A.—No, we got our inforhation about his financial condition from Mr. McMath and from closed rinnels.

Needham admitted he had referred to the case a "God-send to the state police," but meant it was a welcome chance to show heir efficiency. His eyes flashed as Burwick piled his questions.

ASKS ABOUT PUBLICITY

Suddenly switching his attack, the defense counsel drew from the police head an admission that he has contracted with a national magazine to write the McMath kidnaping story after close of the trial. He denied he was to be paid for it.

Q.—Are you doing it for publicity? A.—Call it what you will.

Q.—You are proud of that story and the one which appeared under your name in a Boston paper? A.—I am proud of the state police and the job they did in this case.

Q.—And if the state convicts these boys, you'll be proud of that, too? A.—I hope to be proud of it.

Needham admitted police had learned from Lee "speaking for McMath" that the ransom of $60,000 was to be paid aboard Lee's boat, the Bob.

QUESTIONS PLIED HARD

Q.—Did you ever make any effort to help Kenneth identify the man called Bill? A.—None, no sir.

Burwick hammered incessantly at the police lack of interest in the "rum-runner named Bill" and Needham always replied he did not believe such a person existed.

Q.—How many times did you question McMath about this case? A.—Five or six times prior to May 7. (Peggy was returned May 5.)

Q.—Why did you question him five or six times? A.—To get information about the case.

Q.—He begged you to keep police away? A.—He did.

ADMITS THIRD WARRANT.

Needham admitted his understanding another warrant—a John Doe—had been issued at the time the brothers were arrested.

Willard Carleton, counsel for Cyril, won from Needham an admission that the general had no knowledge of Cyril having received financial gain from the kidnaping.

Q.—McMath never helped you at all, did he? A.—Oh, yes, he did.

Walter Cahoon, Harwichport ball player and friend of Kenneth, testified Kenneth told him within three hours after the kidnaping that rum-runners had got him mixed up in it, and that it was "a devil of a mess." Cahoon said he was afraid to tell police, fearing the rum gang.

First Lady's Name Joins Babe Ruth's -:- On Boy's 'Ball of Fame'

MRS. ROOSEVELT BILLY HANLEY

PRESIDENT'S WIFE GRANTS YOUNG GALLANT'S REQUEST

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, first lady of the land, just before she placed her signature beside that of "Babe" Ruth on a unique "baseball of fame." She was seated in her car in front of the Statler when Billy Hanley, who is here with his father from Stafford Springs, Ct., timidly approached. "Will you sign it?" Billy asked coyly. "Babe Ruth did." Of course," said Mrs. Roosevelt—and did as the crowd applauded. (Boston American photo.

THE ONLY ONE IN THE WORLD

Here's the champion autograph hunter of them all—Billy Hanley, 8—as he contemplates in wondrous elation the only baseball in the world of its kind—inscribed by both the First Lady and the Babe, monarch of swat. Now it is also the most prized of all baseballs.

'Love and Kisses' Sour to Wife; Divorce Sweet

Endearing messages of love and kisses by the score failed to convince Mrs. Ethel C. Allen that her husband was faithful to her, Edward E. Allen, Lynn jeweler, told Judge Harry R. Dow today in Salem Probate Court, where he seeks a divorce on a charge of cruelty.

Referring to his mate as "the best cook and housekeeper in the world," Allen testified that she was also a "very jealous woman," who resisted in believing that he was untrue to her, although he was at home every night and all day on Sundays.

"Dearest ray of sunshine" and "dearest to my heart" were examples of the messages the jeweler sent his wife when she was on her vacation or in the hospital, he said. One early period 37 crosses; another 168; and another 187. All of them signified kisses.

COST HIM 2 JOBS.

Allen admitted, under cross-examination by his wife's attorney, Medley Holdsworth of Lynn, that he wrote one letter in which he said, "This letter is sealed with kiss for you, my dear, dear wife,' and said he still had some regard for her, but she had none for him.

Before entering business for himself, Allen said, he lost a position in Boston and another in Salem because of his wife's actions.

She would accuse him of having affairs with every woman who worked in the place, he said, and even with the customers.

It got so after a while that he would tremble so much he would be unable to repair watches, he declared.

Shortly after their marriage in July, 1920, Allen and his wife moved to Somerville, he said, and later to Salem. While working at a leading jewelry establishment in the latter city, his wife confronted a girl who left the building ahead of him and ordered her to "leave her husband alone."

NO BATH ALONE.

His troubles increased after buying a store in Lynn, Allen testified, and each day his wife would walk up and down outside, making remarks to passersby. When he would come out, she would follow him, shouting epithets, he said.

"I lost weight and became so nervous I couldn't do efficient work," Allen testified.

He added that it was impossible to continue living with her from a health standpoint. He denied he asked her to "rub his back" when he was taking a bath, but declared she insisted upon doing so, saying he couldn't "take a bath alone."

Mrs. Allen is contesting the suit.

Rail Unions Fight Proposed New Cut

Chicago, June 16 (AP)—Spokesmen for nine million union workers on America's 201 class one railroads declared today they would ignore the demands of their employers for a 22½ per cent reduction in wages to replace a 10 per cent temporary "deduction" in effect at present until November 1.

ELY WOULD RID CITY OF HULKS

Gov. Ely today told a large delegation of workers and members of the Legislature from Boston that he is in favor of an additional appropriation to complete cleaning up the hulks beached in East Boston. The delegation on Monday will urge passage of a bill appropriating $50,000.

The Governor was told that unless the money is made available soon, many of the 350 men, who had been given temporary employment on the project and who are now laid off, will have to seek help from the city welfare department.

A.A.A. Opposes 'Tax Raids' in Convention

Washington, June 16 (AP)—The American Automobile Association opened its 31st annual convention here today in a militant mood against what it considers "tax exploitation of car owners." Thomas P. Henry of Detroit, president, said that in addition to making plans for "opposing new tax raids," attention will be given to steps for eliminating driving hazards and controlling reckless drivers.

Reds Tighten Grip on Soviet Farms

Moscow, June 16 (AP)—The Communist party tightened its grip on Soviet agriculture today by decreeing through its central committee the immediate extension of control by its "political sections" to all collective farms.

The present collectivized area of Russia embraces about 80 per cent of the land and 60 to 70 per cent of the peasantry.

DODGE SCION IS DIVORCED

Detroit, June 16 (AP)—A divorce was granted in circuit court today to Marie O'Connor Dodge, of Grosse Point, Mich., from John Duvall Dorge, 30-year-old son of the late John F. Dodge, motorcar magnate. Mrs. Dodge charged desertion.

In a property settlement arranged in court, Mrs. Dodge will receive $300,000, while a trust fund of $100,000 will be set up for her daughter, Mary Ann, nine.

The Dodges were married in 1918. Mrs. Dodge charged her husband deserted her in February, 1930. She said he went to Europe and remained there a year despite her entreaties for a reunion. Since his return, she said, he has been living in Florida and in Canada.

Schooner Lost, 15 Saved

St. John's, Nfld., June 16—(AP)—The schooner Maxwell Roy, bound for Labrador with provisions run aground at Bay de Berte today and is expected to be a total loss. The crew of 15 escaped to shore.

HESTER SWAIN DORR'S BRIDE IN BACK BAY

Nervous Throng Waits in Vain for an Uproar by Unbidden Guest

What the courts could not prevent, and what the police could not stop, the love of a divorced mother for her only daughter accomplished alone today.

And alone in the brilliant gathering of 500 socialites who witnessed the wedding of Hester Swain, daughter of Charles B. Swain, wealthy Winchester lumberman, to Hancock Dorr, Back Bay clubman, at the Church of the Advent at noon today, Hester had no fear, even halt the wedding. He said so in a petition heard in Suffolk Court last Monday. He said he was certain his ex-wife's "melodramatic temperament" would lead her to disturb the ceremony. The court refused to bar Miss Cook from an event so dear to the heart of every mother, the wedding of her daughter.

GUESTS APPREHENSIVE

The attendant publicity on Swain's unique petition made the guests fearful. They started as every unfamiliar sound and turned frequently, with hurried jerks of the head, toward the door.

The strains of the wedding march from Lohengrin faded, and Hester, in white satin gown and tulle veil, carrying lilies-of-the-valley, stood with her husband-elect in front of the altar wheil the Rev. Julian D. Hamlin, pastor of the church, bean intoning the marriage service.

There was a tomb-like silence that made the minister's words ring out, as though shouted, at that part of the service where he asked:

Mrs. Holcomb Weds 3rd Mate in London

Newport, R. I., June 16 (NSB)—Mrs. Benjamin Royal Holcomb, of Newport and New York, became the bride of Drummond Wolff, member of an old English family and a grandson of Sir Henry Drummond Wolff, in London last Tuesday, it was learned here today.

The former Mrs. Holcomb has been in Europe for the past year since the death of her second husband, Benjamin Royal Holcomb, former naval attache to President Coolidge. It was her third marriage.

Calls Dairy Conference

Washington, June 16 (AP)—Secretary Wallace today called a conference for Monday, June 26, of representatives of all dairy interests to begin drafting a program for the application of the farm adjustment act.

Awaits Stork

London cables today brought the news that friends of Lady Charles Cavendish, who before her marriage last year was Adele Astaire, American musical comedy star, expect her to announce soon an anticipated visit from the stork late in the fall.

7 ROUTED OUT IN SOMERVILLE

Fire that threatened the Bonair st. section of Somerville drove seven persons to the street and damaged a house, a barn and an open air shed to the extent of $15,000 early today.

Two of the persons driven out, Mrs. Ella Fifield, 78, and Mrs. Alice T. Beveridge, 62, were led through smoke by Patrolmen Pierce Ronayne and Thomas J. Flanagan from the first floor of 44 Bonair st. The women carried out three pets, a dog, a parrot and a canary.

Mrs. Fairbairn, wife of George Fairbairn, pharmacist for the Middlesex House of Correction at Billerica; their daughters, Mrytle and Eleanor, and a son, Chester, were forced out of the second floor, together with Mrs. Jennie Flynn, sister of Mrs. Fairbairn. A parrot was rescued from the Fairbairn apartment by Fireman Charles Donovan of Engine 3.

WORLD PARLEY IN RECESS

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service Staff Correspondent

London, June 16 (INS)—In an atmosphere of hope mingled with disputes over procedure, the world economic conference organized into two main commissions today and recessed for the week-end to permit leaders to thresh out details.

"Gentlemen, let us go to work," said James M. Cox, of Ohio, presiding as chairman at the first meeting of the monetary and financial commission.

But opinions were so varied as to which direction the work lay that they decided to quit until Monday.

Senator Key Pittman of Nevada and Senator James Couzens of Michigan were placed on the monetary commission. Ralph W. Morrison of Texas and Representative Sam D. McReynolds of Tennessee were named to the economic commission.

The wheat conference, also in session today, broke up without getting anywhere on an agreement between the principal producers for acreage reduction.

Getting Attention at London Parley

London, June 16 (AP)—In the midst of solemn deliberations by the economics commission of the World Economic Conference today, the chairman, Premier Colijn of the Netherlands, announced that 4 pounds, 10 shillings had been found, and that the owner could have them by applying to him.

The delegates, many of whom previously had slumped in their seats, promptly sat up.

Bank Bandits Get $3000

Black Rock, Ark., June (16)—Three men robbed the First National Bank here of about $3,000 today, kidnaped the cashier and released him about two miles from town.

MATTERN PAST DUE AT NOME

Nome, Alaska, June 16 (INS)—Nearly 40 hours have passed since the departure of "Smiling" Jimmy Mattern, Texas round-the-world solo flier, from Khabarovsk, Siberia, bound for Nome, and as yet today no word has been received of the intrepid aviator.

Mattern's gas supply was estimated to have a maximum limit of about 35 hours.

Mattern's route along the Siberian coast and over the Aleutian Islands covers one of the most desolate and isolated portions of the world, and it was considered possible he may have landed safely at a point inaccessible to communications.

Aviators recalled the adventures of Cecil A. Allen and Don Moyle, two Americans who attempted the trans-Bering hop several years ago but were forced down on an uninhabited Aleutian island. They were given up as lost for several days but procured fuel from a passing boat and made their way to the North American continent.

Nickel Still at Par

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

While the American dollar is being kicked around Paris, Berlin and London, it is still going strong in Kansas City and Buffalo.

Here's the dope sheet on our other coins:

New York: The nickel is still holding its own with the subway.

New Orleans: The dime opened slow but rallied. At closing time it compared favorably with a glass of beer.

Boston: With both teams near last place, the silver quarter attained great strength. It is now good in either league.

Los Angeles. The half-dollar is now accepted as legal tender. The movie stars used to use 'em to cap milk bottles.

CLAM DIGGERS GO TO JAIL

The tale of a speedy automobile trip from Quincy to Boston and a two hour motorboat race around Quincy Bay was recited today in Quincy district court by Fish and Game Warden Howard Williard.

Warden Williard's recitation landed four Hough's Neck men in Dedham jail for 40 days each when they could not pay a $20 fine levied after they were found guilty of digging clams in a contaminated area.

The men found guilty are Fred Brooks, Joseph Malich, both of Rastchford st., William Brooks, and James E. Foster, both of Sea st.

Warden Williard testified that he saw the men digging clams at midnight about two weeks ago. They were too far off shore to allow him to give chase on foot so he drove to Boston to get the state boat. The men escaped in their motorboat after a two-hour chase, he said.

WELCOME DELIGHTS FIRST LADY

fasted before driving on to Groton Academy from which, 30 years ago today, the President himself was graduated.

Two Roosevelts were graduated today. They were Franklin D., Jr., and Cornelius Van F. Roosevelt, grandson of the former President. Theodore Roosevelt and son of Theodore Roosevelt, former governor-general of the Philippine Islands.

WILL ENTER HARVARD

Franklin, Jr., will enter Harvard in the autumn, further following along in the footsteps of his father, Mrs. Roosevelt told newspapermen.

At South Station she learned for the first time that Congress had adjourned and expressed her pleasure at the speedy action on the Capitol business affairs.

"You're looking well, Mrs. Roosevelt," one reporter remarked.

She laughed.

"Thank you, thank you," she said.

Asked regarding the President's health, she said:

"He's looking better today than I've ever seen him before."

Mrs. Roosevelt said she would return to New York by train tonight. Mrs. Dall will stay on for a visit with James and Betsy Roosevelt.

GOES WITHOUT GUARD

Following her custom of going about without guard of any kind, the President's wife motored to Groton, over Route 2, through Lexington, Lincoln and Concord, without Col. Starling or any secret service men, and with no police escort. She and James and Mrs. Dall and the President's personal chauffeur, Andy Snyder, a young chap from Rhinebeck, N. Y., were the only ones in the car. Beside Snyder on the front seat of the big machine was piled high with luggage.

At Groton the party was joined by James' wife, the former Betsy Cushing, who drove from Rye, N. H., with Franklin, Jr., and John, also a student at the academy, embraced their mother. All attended chapel after Mrs. Roosevelt had phoned the White House.

Mrs. Roosevelt wore a large blue hat, blue shoes, sand hose and light blue summer traveling coat beneath which showed a few inches of her blue dress.

DUE HERE TOMORROW

President Roosevelt's vacation schedule will be carried out exactly as it was planned before a rebellious Congress prevented his attendance at graduation exercises at Groton.

The President will leave Washington at 8:30 p. m. tonight, arrive in Boston early tomorrow and motor to Groton just as his earlier schedule provided. He will spend several hours with Franklin, Jr., and a younger son, John. About 2 p. m. he will leave Groton and motor to Marion, where his eldest son, James has the 45-foot seagoing schooner Amberjack ready to sail.

Tomorrow night will be spent aboard the Amberjack in the Marion harbor and on Sunday morning the little boat will sail out to sea for a leisurely cruise northward to Campobello, the Roosevelt island camp just across the Maine border in Nova Scotia.

On the cruise up the coast Franklin and John will join the President and continue with him to Campobello.

The President is due at Eastport, Me., two miles from his destination, on June 29 or 30 to board the Indianapolis, aboard which he returns to Washington.

IN TOUCH WITH WORLD.

During his voyage the President will be able to keep in constant touch with world affairs, including advices from the American delegation to the London Economic Conference, through the United States destroyer that will accompany him on the cruise, and subsequently on the Indianapolis.

The Amberjack II was riding at anchor at Marion today. However, the Chief Executive had planned to receive a granite vase at Quincy while en route from Groton to Marion by automobile, and efforts were being made by Mayor Charles A. Ross to have the President go from Washington to Boston and motor through Quincy to Marion.

The Rev. Arthur Bryant Whitney, minister of the First Parish Church, had suggested that while the President was in Quincy, he inspect the church in the crypt of which lie the bodies of John Adams and John Quincy Adams, second and sixth Presidents, and their wives.

QUINCY ALL DECORATED

Quincy was gay with flags and bunting and streamers City Hall was a banner reading "Welcome Our President."

James Roosevelt announced last night that his second series of talks on the radio would not be resumed until July 13.

Young Roosevelt said that he had arranged to lease Apple Tree cottage, a quarter of a mile from Ocean Boulevard at Rye Beach, N. H., for the remainder of the season. His other cottage at Little Boar's Head, N. H., was burned in a fire caused by a short circuit in a blind attic. Apple Tree cottage, owned by Shirley Philbrick, was occupied for two seasons by E. G. Burkham of St. Louis, who is spending this summer in Europe.

It is a 2½-story structure with 16 rooms, including six large bedrooms. The cottage is surrounded by maple trees and shrubs. From the south porch is a fine view of the ocean. In the rear is the Abenaqui golf links. Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt and their baby daughter, Sara Delano, will move into their new home Monday.

First Lady, Babe Sign on Baseball

The most prized baseball in all the United States is today in the possession of Billy Hanley, 8, of Stafford Springs, Ct., who is stopping with his father, William B. Hanley, at the Hotel Statler.

On one side of the ball is the signature of Babe Ruth. On the other side is the signature of Eleanor Roosevelt.

Billy got the ball at the Red Sox-Yanks game yesterday and George Herman Ruth signed it. Today at the Statler, he timidly approached Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt in her car as she awaited the start for Groton.

"Look," he said, "Babe Ruth! Will you sign it, too?"

"Of course," Mrs. Roosevelt laughed. And did.

Later she signed a telegraph blank for a messenger boy.

Even President's Wife Is Woman

President's ladies or Judy O'Gradys, women are women when it comes to clothes.

At Hotel Statler, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's eye fell on a little rip between thumb and finger of a blue polka dot silk glove worn by her daughter, Mrs. Anna Curtis Dall.

"Why don't you mend it?" asked the First Lady.

"No, mother, it will only tear more, and wrinkle," daughter replied.

LOWELL RULING UPSET

trict court erred in holding that the indictment was void and discharging the prisoner, and our order is—

"The order of the district court is vacated, and the case is remand to that court, with directions to enter an order remanding the prisoner to the custody of Frank Hale (State police lieutenant) for execution of the warrant of the Governor of Massachusetts."

The Governor of Massachusetts, on request of Governor Pollard of Virginia, had issued an extradition warrant ordering Crawford's return to Virginia.

Crawford is charged in Virginia with the murder in January, 1932, of Mrs. Spencer Ialley, wealthy sportswoman, and Mrs. Nina Buckner, her maid. He was indicted in February and found long afterward in Boston.

After Gov. Ely granted extradition, Crawford's lawyers appealed to Judge Lowell who granted a writ of habeas corpus in April and then ordered Crawford freed. But the state of Massachusetts appealed from this ruling to the Circuit Court and Crawford was jailed to await the outcome.

The Circuit Court states that in the Harry Thaw case the U. S. Supreme Court reversed the order of the Federal District Court for New Hampshire which had ordered Thaw's discharge.

Thaw had been captured near the Canadian boundary, in New Hampshire, after an escape from Matteawan, where he was incarcerated as a dangerous person, following his acquittal of the Stanford White murder, on the ground that he was insane.

NEGRO BAN INADMISSIBLE

The court in that case stated:

"The constitutionally required surrender is not to be interfered with by the summary process of habeas corpus upon speculation as to what ought to be the result of a trial in the place where the Constitution provides for its taking place."

One of the claims in Thaw's behalf was that, if he was insane, he could not have committed a crime in sensible.

The circuit court in the present case gives as its opinion that evidence concerning barring of Negroes from Virginia grand juries was not admissible in the district court hearing on Crawford.

Negroes are barred, not by statute, but in actual practice, and the Circuit Court, after citing several decisions, states:

"It is established that discrimination exercised by the state officers of Virginia in making up lists of grand jurors, by whom Crawford was indicted, was an infringement of his rights guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment.

"The question is whether this discrimination rendered the indictment void."

Several other decisions are cited, followed by this conclusion:

"These point to the conclusion that the matter is a question that must be availed of at the trial in the state court where the indictment was returned."

The court then states that in its opinion the discrimination does not render the indictment void, nor does it deprive Virginia of the right to put Crawford on trial. But it does give him the right to raise objections at his trial and carry the fight then into the federal courts.

Judge Lowell Is Silent on Ruling

Judge James A. Lowell of the U. S. District Court was at his home on Hammond st., Newton, today, enjoying his rose garden, when the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals was handed down, reversing him on the Crawford case.

"Have you heard of the decision reversing yours?" he was asked.

"No," he said.

"Do you wish to comment on it?"

"No; thank you for calling me."

U. S. Asks Bids on 25 Millior in Work

Washington, June 16 (AP)—The administration approved plans today to call for bids on $25,000,000 of public building 45 days from now, in addition to a like amount on which bids are now being sought. Detailed lists of the specific projects are yet to be formulated.

Another $50,000,000 probably will be thrown on the market in 90 days, assuring that the government would seek to have $100,000,000 of new buildings under way before October.

Britain and Italy Pay U. S. in Silver

Washington, June 16 (AP)—Twenty million ounces of silver have been received at Bombay, India, by the United States as payment of the $10,000,000 partial satisfaction of the British war debt installment. Great Britain, however, is responsible for its delivery to the United States.

The State Department also disclosed today that the federal assay office in New York had received two million ounces of silver from Italy, meeting its partial payment of $1,000,000.

'KING' SOLOMON MURDER DEFENSE ENDS WITH THREE DENYING KILLING

at the club, no secrecy, no evidence at all of conspiracy.

"Depending entirely upon the state's evidence, I submit you that Solomon had never been to the club before, therefore there was no allurement, no trapping, no enticement—therefore no conspiracy.

"Mrs. Burrill, the state's star witness, gave testimony of the highest importance, because it corroborates the testimony of Karlonas an def Burke. Karlonas told you how he and Burke went into the washroom, followed by Solomon and Coyne; that an argument took place between Coyne and Solomon and that Karlonas told them, 'Cut it out,' and that he was going to get his coat and go home—and that he came back with Coyne's coat and told him to break up the argument and go home.

"Mrs. Burrill told you that the same voice which had said 'Cut it out!' said later to break up the argument and go home."

Only the three defendants took the witness stand for the defense, O'Donnell being the last of the trio to testify.

In his testimony, O'Donnell, the only one of the six alleged slayers of Solomon to surrender to police, declared that he knew nothing of the murder until he was out of the Cotton Club and was driving the car away, intending to go home to South Boston.

EXONERATES MOORE

O'Donnell, in his testimony, also defended Moore, one of the three fugitives in the case, stating that Moore had been with him all the time and also did not know of the murder until they were back in the automobile.

Karlonas, however, under a merciless cross-examination by Asst. Dist. Atty. Frederick T. Doyle, admitted himself to be a "consistent liar" and admitted that practically everything he told police in New Orleans and Boston w.. a lie.

He confessed also that he lacked the bravery of O'Donnell, who gave himself up, and that he was afraid of retaliation from "Solomon's crowd."

5 PINTS OF LIQUOR

Today's session opened with the resumption of Karlonas' cross-examination by Prosecutor Doyle.

Q.—How long was it after you entered the Cotton Club that the party started to drink? A.—Five or ten minutes.

Q.—Who had the liquor? A.—Brantley brought it.

Q.—How much liquor did you have? A.—Brantley brought two pints.

Q.—How much liquor did you have altogether at the club? A.—Five pints.

Q.—You had some beer also? A.—I don't drink beer, but the boys had about 18 or 20 bottles.

Q.—What time did you arrive at the club? A.—About 1 o'clock.

Q.—And what time did you leave? A.—Between 3:30 and 4.

Q.—Did you see Solomon get up from his table? A.—No.

Q.—Did you meet him in the archway? A.—No.

Q.—Did Coyne leave the table with you, Burke and Scully? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you see where Scully stood in the annex? A.—No.

Q.—Was it true when you told someone Scully was standing outside the washroom door? A.—No.

Doyle then showed Karlonas the diagram which Sergt. William F. McCarthy produced yesterday.

Q.—The letters on this diagram are in your own writing, are they not? A.—Yes.

Q.—As a matter of fact, you talked pretty freely in New Orleans, didn't you? A.—No.

Q.—This diagram was drawn by Sergt. McCarthy, wasn't it? A.—Yes.

Q.—You put in where the people were? A.—Yes.

Q.—You put the letter S opposite the swinging doors? A.—Yes.

DIAGRAM IN EVIDENCE.

Q.—You told them that was where Scully was standing? A.—Yes.

Q.—You did it of your own free will? A.—Yes.

Doyle then offered the diagram as evidence. It was admitted over defense objections, with the understanding that it would not affect O'Donnell.

Q.—You put other initials down on the diagram? A.—Yes.

Q.—You put S at the second table on the right? A.—Yes.

Q.—That was for Solomon? A.—They told me Solomon was sitting there.

Q.—And you lied when you said Scully was standing outside the swinging doors? A.—Yes.

Q.—Why did you lie? A.—I didn't want to get implicated in the case.

Q.—You thought if you placed Scully standing outside the doors it wouldn't implicate you? A.—No.

Q.—What do you mean? A.—I don't know.

Q.—How did you think that would keep you out? A.—I didn't want to admit I was in the toilet because that might put me in the case.

Q.—Why did you lie about Scully? A.—I didn't know what to say.

NOT IN WASHROOM

Q.—Were you going to implicate Scully and keep yourself out? A.—No.

Q.—Why did you mention Scully as standing at the door? A.—I didn't think there was any kind of a case that would implicate anybody.

Q.—Why didn't you tell the truth? A.—I didn't want to get into a shooting case.

Q.—Were you in the toilet? A.—Not at the time of the shooting.

Q.—Now, Mr. Karlonas, isn't it true that Scully was at the door? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Did you make any more lying statements at New Orleans? A.—Yes.

Q.—What were they? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Because there were so many of them? A.—Something like that.

Q.—About everything you said to the police was a lie, wasn't it? A.—Yes.

Q.—Everything you said to the police in Boston was a lie? A.—I wouldn't say everything.

Q.—You have lied so much about this case you don't know how many lies you have told, haven't you? A.—Yes.

LIED ABOUT EVERYTHING

Q.—You lied when you said you weren't in the toilet because you thought it would keep you out of the case? A.—Yes.

Q.—Didn't you tell Inspector McCarthy that Scully was standing outside the door? A.—Yes.

Q.—That was another lie? A.—Yes.

Q.—When you said, in your questioning at headquarters, you were not in the toilet, you lied, didn't you? A.—Yes.

Q.—When you said you did not see Burke, that was another lie? A.—Yes.

Q.—You did leave the table with Burke, didn't you? A.—Yes.

Q.—You were part owner of the Oldsmobile car? A.—I had a right to use it.

Q.—It was used in delivering alcohol? A.—Yes.

Q.—Burke and O'Donnell were your partners in the alcohol business? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was Coyne a partner? A.—No.

Q.—How was business in January? A.—Pretty good.

Q.—Did you have any orders for delivery on Jan. 25? A.—No, we had to go and find out first.

At this point the court asked what day of the week Jan. 24 fell on, there was some uncertainty, but it was finally decided it was a Tuesday.

Karlonas then was questioned as to what he did after leaving the Cotton Club and entering the car in Northfield st. Karlonas testified:

"We started for South Boston and somebody in the car said not to go over there because there was a shooting in the Cotton Club and we would be 'put on the spot. Then we started for Providence, but Johnny Moore said he had to go to the hospital next day for an operation and wanted to know if we'd take him to Worcester, which we did.

"Then the rest of us went to New York."

NO HAT OR COAT.

Q.—Did you have a hat and coat? A.—No.

Q.—Did Burke have his hat and coat? A.—No.

Q.—Did Coyne have his hat and coat? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did Scully have his? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did O'Donnell have his hat and coat? A.—Yes.

Q.—And that was a winter night in January, wasn't it? A.—Yes.

Q.—And you drove around New York without a hat and coat? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was your car held up in West Roxbury? A.—Yes, by four officers.

Q.—Did you buy clothes in New York? A.—No. I bought a hat in Newark, N. J., and a shirt.

Q.—What name did you register under in Newark? A.—Frank Marcus.

Q.—Did Burke use a fictitious name? A.—Yes.

Q.—And then where did you go from Newark? A.—Burke went to a relative's in Newark for the night and I stayed at a hotel and from there went to Jacksonville, and from there to New Orleans.

"THEY PAID THE BILLS"

Q.—How much money did you have in Newark? A.—Thirty-eight dollars.

Q.—Did Burke pay any expenses? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did Miss Coyne pay expenses? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where did O'Donnell leave you? A.—In Jacksonville.

Q.—What did he say when he left? A.—He said he was going back to see about the business and get it going again.

Q.—By business, did he mean your alcohol delivery? A.—Yes. Burke and O'Donnell were partners in? A.—Yes.

Q.—And didn't you come back to Boston with him? A.—I was afraid of Solomon's crowd.

Q.—O'Donnell was coming back? A.—Yes.

Q.—And didn't you consider yourself as brave as O'Donnell? A.—No.

Q.—How much money did you have when you left the Cotton Club until you reached New Orleans? A.—Thirty-eight dollars, and I spent that.

Q.—Did Burke pay your railroad fares from Jacksonville to New Orleans and you? A.—Yes.

Q.—And you say Coyne paid some of the bills? A.—Yes.

Q.—You told Inspector John McCarthy in New Orleans that you and Coyne and Burke had bought a half interest in a speakeasy in New Orleans? A.—Yes, but I didn't pay anything. They told me I was entitled to a share.

$150 FOR BLIND PIG

Q.—What was the purchase price of the speakeasy? A.—We were to pay $150 with $75 down.

Q.—Did you pay any of that $75? A.—No.

Q.—Didn't you tell Inspector McCarthy that you paid $40? A.—If I did, I lied.

Q.—Did you tell Inspector McCarthy that your partners had bought a half interest in the speakeasy from Emil Fuchs? A.—Yes.

Q.—And that was the truth? A.—Yes.

Q.—And if you said you paid $40 of the $75 to be paid down you now say it was a lie? A.—Yes.

Q.—Why did you lie in such a manner? A.—I didn't want to have them think I was broke.

Q.—You didn't want to have them think you were broke although you were arrested on the charge of murder and armed robbery? A.—No.

Q.—And you lied about it? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you receive any money from anybody from the time you left the Cotton Club until you started in the speakeasy business in New Orleans? A.—No.

Q.—Didn't you tell Inspector McCarthy you made some money on gambling and the horses? A.—Yes I told him that.

TOOK THREE GIRLS OUT

Q.—How did you get the money to gamble and play the horses? A.—Oh, I only had a few dollars and I played the horses and made $24, and paid my room rent.

Atty. John J. Donovan made an opening before introducing his client, O'Donnell, as a witness. He said O'Donnell had met the others on the night of January 23 with Moore. The party of six went to a South End speakeasy and then got three Brighton girls and went with them to an apartment in the Back Bay. Later they took the girls home at midnight and went to the Cotton Club.

Donovan said that while the party sat in the Cotton Club, O'Donnell and Moore conversed together and paid little attention to what the others said.

"O'Donnell will tell you," said Donovan, "that he had no knowledge of the shooting or a holdup or a robbery. He will tell you that there was very little said at the table by the others and that he received orders from other occupants while driving the car after the affair."

O'Donnell then was placed on the stand and questioned by Donovan.

O'Donnell, tall and black-haired, wore a blue serge suit with blue polkadot tie. He said he is 20 years old and lived with his father and two sisters in West Third st., South Boston. He said his mother died last November.

"On the night of Jan. 23," he testified, "about 8 o'clock, I met Karlonas and Burke at my home. We went to Brighton to the home of three girls, and met Johnny Moore and took the girls to Johnny Moore's girl's apartment until midnight, when we took the girls back to their home in Brighton.

"LEFT WITH MOORE"

"Then we went to the Crawford Club near the Cotton Club, where we met Coyne and Scully. We had some drinks at the Crawford Club and went to the Cotton Club about 1 a. m.

"Four others entered the club ahead of me. I assisted Moore, who was lame."

Q.—Did you see Solomon sitting at a table? A.—No.

Q.—Who supplied the liquor at the Cotton Club? A.—Al Brantley.

Q.—Did Brantley join the party and drink? A.—Yes.

Q.—At some later time, did you miss some of the others from your party? A.—Yes, four of them left our table, leaving me with Moore.

Q.—Did you pay any attention to where the other four went? A.—Moore and I were talking. I waited for him to finish a glass of beer and then we started to go home. I saw Karlonas come out of the coat-room with a coat and hat. Then I saw Burke at the checkroom. He handed Moore his coat and hat and handed me my coat. I was helping Moore on with his overcoat when I heard a shot. Everybody jumped and rushed for the door. I said to Moore, "Come on, let's get out of here."

Q.—Did you get your hat? A.—No, that was left behind.

The witness identified from a group of four hats one of two green federas as his. He said it bore a double pencil mark, which was his mark.

3 PIN LIVES ON DEATH CAP

Salem, June 16—The uniform cap of Francis V. Quinn, slain Lynn policeman, was introduced as an exhibit today by defense counsel at trial of three men in Superior Court on the charge of murder.

Atty. James Mahoney, representing Edward Cullen, grilled Medical Examiner Nathaniel P. Breed at great length about head wounds, after Atty. William H. McSweeney, representing Tony Buffa, went over the same ground with an apparently different purpose in mind. Mahoney introduced the cap.

Cullen and Buffa are on trial with Joseph Scrow, whose attorney, Warren Patten, also went deeply into the cause of death, which Dr. Breed said was a compound fracture of the skull, bullet wound in brain, bullet wound near the 12th rib and injury to adjacent tissues.

McSweeney brought out that there was a bruise on the upper forehead which could have been caused by a blow, but Mahoney brought out that this did not cause death, in Dr. Breed's opinion.

Cliff, Facing Second Divorce Suit, Freed of Parole Brake

Warren R. Cliff, 30, of Brookline, who ended his first marital adventure by killing his wife, whom he accused of unfaithfulness, and whose second wife, a Brookline actress and night club entertainer, is now suing him a second time for divorce, was freed in municipal court today of a charge of violating his parole.

Cliff was arrested at the request of New Jersey authorities, at the instigation of his second wife, he intimated. Lieut. Frank Hale of the state police told Judge Good today the New Jersey authorities now decided not to prosecute Cliff any further.

Cliff killed his first wife in Atlantic City and attempted to commit suicide in June, 1929, after he had discovered she was friendly with another man. He was paroled in less than a year, and several months later, married Muriel Crandall, Brookline actress.

She obtained a divorce last December, but asked that the decree be vacated in April of this year. Yesterday, she filed a second suit for divorce in Dedham court.

Wet Victory Hailed by Mayor Murphy

Mayor John J. Murphy of Somerville issued a public statement today in which he said that, while he is a total abstainer himself he hailed as a personal victory the vote of the city Tuesday to permit sale of beer.

"Many persons stated Somerville would vote overwhelmingly against repeal and local license," he said. "Tuesday's vote proves they were wrong and vindicates my authorization for the sale of 3.2 per cent beer.

"A strict watch will be kept on those who attempt to conduct 'speakeasies' and the law will be enforced to the limit."

Now Lloyd George Listed as Stubborn

Lloyd George appeared in East Cambridge court today on a charge of being a stubborn child. It was not the British statesman, however, but his namesake, 17, adopted son of James Pinch, a Putnam ave. (Cam-bridge) carpenter. Lloyd was placed on probation on condition he avoid bad company.

GERMANY ASKS FOR COLONIES

London, June 16 (AP)—Germany asked the world today for an African colonial empire.

A memorandum prepared by Dr. Alfred Hugenberg, German minister of economics, for the economic committee of the World Economic Conference, said there were two possibl ways of increasing Germany's capacity to meet her international debts—first, by giving her an African empire where large public works schemes could be carried through; or, second by opening other new territories "to this people which has not enough space in which to live."

The memorandum set forth the German views of the world crisis and said that Germany is "at the head of the battle against the complete destruction of the accident" and aff Germany "perishes all other peoples will perish with her."

Jewelers Discuss Fair Practice Code

Washington, June 16 (AP)—A tentative outline of a code of fair practice was discussed with officials of the administration by James V. Tower, president of the New England Manufacturing Jewelers and Silversmiths' Association, Inc.; Stephen H. Garner, chairman of the association's code committee; Wallace D. Kenyon and Edward O. Otis, Jr., secretary of the association, together with Rep. Martin, Jr. (R., Mass.).

MOTHER SNUBS WEDDING

Hancock Dorr may not be lawfully joined together, let him now speak, or forever after hold his peace!"

ONLY ECHO ANSWERS

No one dared even turn a hair. Pulses pounded out the seconds that seemed like years while the minister waited for an answer.

There was none.

The wedding service ended, and Hester Swain—now Mrs. Hancock Dorr—marched smilingly down the aisle, her eyes seeking out someone who might be there.

There was a reason for Hster's calmness and happiness. It was a secret she refused to tell.

On Wednesday Miss Cook received a letter at her Garrison st. rooming house which made her eyes wet with tears of joy. Was the letter from her "baby" Hester?

MEETIN GWITH MOTHER?

Yesterday Miss Coow had a secret meeting with "some person" from which she returned to her rooms radiant. Had she talked with her "baby" Hester.

And today, as Hester left the church, and cast a hurried, yet loving glance at a woman who stood unobtrusively at the edge of the crowd of curious who waited outside, there were those who said it was Hester's mother.

But that is a secret that only Hester and one other may share.

The wedding reception was given at the Swain home in Winchester instead of at the Copley-Plaza, as first planned. There was an officer on guard there, but the "unbidden guest" did not appear.

YANKEE DIVISION AT CONCORD

Concord, N. H., June 16 (AP)—The Yankee Division invaded Concord today.

From every point of the compass, by train, automobile and bus, and in the best hitch-hiking fashion, it converged on the city for a three day reunion. Shortly after noon more than a score of automobiles in a motor convoy from Boston rolled in. Some of those here for the convention are wearing berets, some legion uniforms; others, parts of the uniforms they wore during war days.

By the time the first business session opened in the afternoon more than a thousand veterans had registered and more were arriving.

High ranking officers were here, including Gen. Edward L. Logan, who addressed the state Legislature at noon; Gen. Charles H. Cole, who will be chief of the parade tomorrow, and Gen. John H. Sherburne, still remembered as the "best artillery officer in France."

Drab skies greeted the veterans, but the prospect of showers failed to disturb them as they completed plans for a gala ball to be followed by a parade of horribles at midnight.

Prior to the grand ball there will be reunions, with hotels within a radius of 20 miles taken over.

One veteran, here for his first reunion, met a man he thought had been killed. Edward L. Bronsdway, F Battery, 103rd Field Artillery, 26th Division, had started out in his flivver for the World's Fair at Chicago with his wife and two children. He met a war-time buddy, learned of the convention and turned his car around and headed for Concord.

Star Wives Sip Tea as 2 Royal Princes Loses Their Oil Wells

Los Angeles, June 16 (AP)—Affairs of the heart as conducted by the brothers Mdivani, for several days an open page to the public, today had given way to the more prosaic subject of oil wells.

For Mae Murray, film actress, and Mary McCormic, opera singer, the royal road to romance by way of the Georgian republic has terminated in the forest of blackened derricks on the beach at Venice, Cal.

As stockholders of petroleum enterprises in which Princes David and Serge Mdivani are interested met to oust the pair as directors and officers, Miss Murray and Miss McCormic met in the former's hotel room for tea.

"I have had most terrible dreams," observed the singer, who is suing Prince Serge for separate maintenance. "Do you have bad dreams, too, Mac?"

Replied the actress, suing Prince David for divorce, tartly:

"No, I haven't had enough sleep to dream."

Money advanced to the two brothers for their oil well ventures was the principal topic of conversation over the teacups. Meanwhile, at a special meeting of the oil companies' shareholders a new set of officers was elected in the absence of the princes, whose father made a fortune in oil in the Caucasus.

An attorney for Miss McCormic was elected president of the companies and one for Miss Murray, Vice-President D. A. Russell, named as receiver for the Mdivani properties, voted the prince's stock.

The Mdivanis' wives' money is tied up in five wells, good wells, too, they averred in tribute to their husbands, now in Paris.

Convention Hounds Hobble to Concord

Concord, N. H., June 16 (AP)—Two one-legged veterans, self-styled "convention hounds," put into Concord today for the Yankee Division annual reunion.

One was Maurice Weintraub of Providence, R. I., who lost a leg when a German plane dropped a bomb into a dugout and killed 45 Americans.

His companion is Elliot Jackson of Boston, a former sailor, who lost a leg while on the transport Covington when a boiler exploded.

For eight years, the two men said, they have roamed the country in quest of adventure.

Two Mdivani Princes Face Passport Delay

Paris, June 16 (AP)—Passport difficulties may delay the return of the Princes Serge and David Mdivani to America to answer suits brought by their wives.

They are here fo the wedding of their brother Alexis and Barbara Hutton, Woolworth heiress, and indicated today their applications for visas had been referred to Washington because they sought to re-enter the United States not as visitors but to "stay and work."

Dr. White Dead

Montreal, June 16 (AP)—Dr. Ernest Hamilton White, 55, physician and brother of Sen. Smeaton White, is dead here after a long illness.

Friendship Fan Quilt

—By LAURA WHEELER—

IN THE DAYS when quiltmaking first became the American handicraft there not only were certain favorite patterns but also special types of quilts. The friendship quilt was one of them. It varied in style.

Some friendship quilts were made of materials donated by one's many friends to make others, friends congregated of an evening and each friend sewed a block.

This fan pattern lends itself well to the friendship quilt for the fan itself is formed by the patches donated by friends. A quaint pattern in itself, it could be made of fewer materials by using two materials alternately in the fan.

The pattern comes to you with complete simple instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

Send 10c. for this pattern to Boston Evening American Needlework Department, 82 Eighth ave., New York city.

CURLEY BARES CITY AID PLAN

New York, June 16 (U8)—A plan for the rehabilitation of New York city's finances has been evolved by President Roosevelt, and will be divulged at the "opportune time," it was revealed by Mayor James M. Curley of Boston, just before he sailed, with his family, for a six-week vacation in Europe.

As one of the first politicians to espouse the Roosevelt candidacy, and as president of the Mayors' Association of the United States, Curley is reputed to enjoy the President's confidence.

Pressed for details, Mayor Curley declined to give any, but a few moments later said:

"I know that the President believes that cities should be permitted to go into bankruptcy as one of the best means to set their house in order."

Curley paid a glowing tribute to William Randolph Hearst for his advocacy of a nationwide public construction program, which has since been adopted by the Roosevelt administration. The mayor said:

"Three years ago Mr. Hearst said the only salvation of the country lay in labor and construction. President Hoover then regarded it as suicide, but now Roosevelt is working out just such a plan.

"Six years ago we were carrying on a public works program in Boston and matters were adjusting themselves in fine shape. In 1932 the Hoover administration ordered curtailment of public expenditures and our home relief expenses immediately rose 150 per cent."

Chic Women's Summer Garb Picturesque

When summer comes to the Colony Restaurant in New York, summer can be authoritatively said to be here. Acceptance of tentative trends can best be measured in this very, very smart place. So we send eagle-eyed scouts to snoop there, pencil in hand.

We were charmed with the last sheaf of sketches shown today, which were made across the restaurant's snowy tablecloths. The clothes are romantic, mid-Victorian, definitely picturesque.

For instance, there was a feminine frothy organdie blouse that had us all in a state of envy. Tiny accordion pleated rows of Val lace marched across it, tightening up at the throat, dog-collar fashion. Modest as a little girl's dress and, by the same token, thoroughly sophisticated. Very 1900, too, with its longish black cape and naughty black gloves.

At the next table was a modernized Gibson girl. On her carefully coiffed head was a bright red and shiny straw sailor dipped perilously over her nose. So shallow was it that it was held on by a narrow red ribbon in the back. The daisy trimming was cocky. When she got up to leave we saw that she was wearing all red, dotted with almost imperceptible white pin pricks.

On her right is sketched a young girl whose hat turned up all the way round. Close your eyes and you can imagine wide streamers trailing down the back over flying pigtails.

In the foyer we saw a cartwheel hat, and you must have at least one, preferably like the one shown. They should be largely innocent of trimming, relying on their shapes for their success.

In the foyer we saw a girl all in black, from her satin sailor with a little bird demure under the brim, to the hem of her dress. This was high and close at the neck with jeweled clips, had plaits around the hips. Her gloves were simply huge, and, of course, black.

Delicious Meals in Sidewalk Cafe

An unsurpassed cuisine is one of many attractions at the Hotel Brunswick's Sidewalk Cafe, where from noon until midnight one may dine in the open. Hot weather specials are featured at luncheon, dinner and supper hours. Cooling beverages include a fine list of imported and domestic wines and beers.

This season's enlarged cafe was planned to meet increasing demand by Bostonians for a real touch of Paris boulevards. Its success has been assured from the start.

Bunker Hill Parade Promised Fair Day

A good day for the Charlestown parade and other Bunker Hill Day festivities was promised today by the weather man. It is expected to be partly cloudy and warmer.

"June 17, 1825, when they laid the cornerstone of the monument, in the presence of Daniel Webster and Gen. Lafayette, was just such a day," said Tom Phelan, who sends in these daily weather stories.

Whoopee Cruise on Dorothy Bradford

For the first time in New England waterfront history a "whoopee cruise," out beyond the 12-mile limit, will start tomorrow night aboard the newly refitted S. S. Dorothy Bradford from Long Wharf at 10 o'clock.

A Broadway revue, a newly-opened tap-room, dancing to the tunes of a popular band and several other features will be the attraction. The boat will return at 2 a. m.

Safe Easy Way To Lose Fat

How would you like to safely and harmlessly lose 15 pounds of fat in a month and at the same time increase your energy and improve your health?

How would you like to lose your double chin and your too prominent hips and abdomen and at the same time make your skin so clean and clear that it will compel admiration?

Get on the scales today and see how much you weigh—then get a bottle of Kruschen Salts that costs next to nothing and which will last you 4 weeks. Take one half teaspoonful in a glass of hot water in the morning—cut down on pastry and fatty meats—go light on potatoes, butter and cream—and when you have finished the contents of this first bottle weigh yourself again.

After that you'll want to walk around and say to your friends, "One bottle of Kruschen Salts is worth one hundred dollars of any fat person's money."

But refuse imitations—safeguard your health—you lose fat SAFELY with Kruschen.

Leading druggists America over sell Kruschen Salts.

Caesar's Axiom Applied to Critics

By GILBERT SELDES

Gilbert Seldes

A writer whom high school students have to read and don't like—Julius Caesar—filled a rather large book with military dispatches and in the course of them, allowed himself only one comment, so far as I know, on human nature in general. Perhaps he knew nothing more about human beings and perhaps he decided that, having said one good thing he would say no more for fear of lowering his batting average. His remark is that human beings generally find it easy to believe what they want to believe. I think of this in connection with the comments made by conservative publicists on what has been happening in Washington. One writer, who would call himself a progressive, I believe, and certainly was progressive in the days of the older Roosevelt, is of the opinion that the President is veering away from radicalism and would really like to get "the country safely and permanently back on the old track."

In half a dozen addresses to graduating classes the same tone is taken, that our President, although he gives the appearance of radicalism, is really not a bit socialistic and is essentially conservative. Of course, you can do any amount of playing with words. I could prove easily that the true conservative is a radical and the true radical is conservative—I could prove this so that it looked all right on paper, but it would not have any meaning.

I suggested that we drop the words and see what Mr. Roosevelt has actually attempted and accomplished. I confess a prejudice in this matter because I grew rather bold in the first weeks of the new Administration and suggested that Mr. Roosevelt might be creating a substitute for revolution in America.

To the Roots

It was perfectly clear when the Government put its firm hand on the banks that the Government would be compelled to put a hand, perhaps not so heavy, on industry. With the passage of the Industrial Recovery Control bill this becomes a fact. The State and Federal governments both have exercised control before, but a new thing now enters into American life—the Government undertakes to say not only what is necessary and desirable, but what is permitted. As recently as six months ago we were still pledged to the rights of the individual; today we are pledged to the rights of the community. If that is not radical, if that does not go to the root of our economic life I don't know what is and what does.

A Machine Stops

It is an appealing thing for a patriotic American to lose faith in machinery and man at the same time. Although I am just intelligent enough to know that no machine works perfectly and forever, I experienced a shock the other day when a motor car in which I was riding—not driving—simply refused to go. It had gone well enough through the Bronx River Parkway, but did not go a mechanic would make it go. For a moment it appeared that my faith was justified. A mechanic was found, decided that all he needed to do was to blow out the feed line, and instantly the car responded. But five blocks later another red light got on its nerves and the same process was gone through again, and then the car was abandoned and overhauled and brought safely through traffic the next day and again refused to run.

This meant simply that a machine had broken down, a simple machine, common and pestiferous on every road in the country, and that the specialists and experts were unable to restore it. The position is not serious so far, but it is unnerving.

At the first red light it balked and no persuasion would change its mind. This struck me as being as unreasonable as a refusal of the sun to rise or the tide to come in.

In mechanical matters I live in a fool's paradise and have always assumed that if a machine

Come over to the SUNNY SIDE OF LIFE

Do you want to feel always at your best? To meet each day with fresh vitality? You can. For when you're healthy, you're happy.

A delicious cereal provides the "bulk" that is so important in overcoming common constipation.

Tests show Kellogg's ALL-BRAN also supplies vitamin B to further aid regular habits. In addition, ALL-BRAN is twice as rich in iron as an equal weight of beef liver.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that in leafy vegetables. What a relief to enjoy an appetizing cereal instead of taking patent medicines.

Serve as a cereal or use in cooking. Directions on the red-and-green package. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

N.E. CAMP DATES SET FOR GUARD

Washington, June 16 (AP)—The war department said today national guard training camps would be conducted as usual in New England this year.

Among camps for which dates have been set are Camp Keys, Me., July 22-Aug. 5; Ft. Ethan Allen, Vt., Aug. 19-Sept. 2; Marston Mill, Mass., July 15-25; Webster, N. H., Aug. 19-Sept. 2; Ft. Devens, Mass., June 17-Aug. 5; Ft. Williams, Me., July 1-15.

Man With $350 Books Seized

Too much knowledge is more dangerous than a little knowledge, if it happens that you are carrying the knowledge in the form of three bags of books, to which you cannot justify title.

Ellery Richards of Smith st., Lowell, looked suspicious because of the amount of book learning he was lugging out of Colesworthy's book shop on Cornhill today, and Special Officers Michael Stapleton and Thomas Kearns quizzed him.

Richards had books valued at $350 in his bags, and could not show a receipt, according to police, so they took him to Milk st. station. Richards is a former book dealer, according to police, and, as such, had access to book stores, where he is alleged to have borrowed many volumes.

SHOE WORKERS SET TO MEET

The National Shoe Workers' Association, which has developed from small beginnings to become a leading factor in the industry in the past 18 months, starts its first convention tomorrow at Lynn.

This association has changed Lynn from an open shop community to virtually a closed shop city.

Amalgamation of all shoe workers' unions into one organization is to be attempted and is one of the important matters before the 60 delegates at the convention at Lynn this week-end. The national recovery act will also be discussed.

PREMIERE

By Robert Terry Shannon

Driving in silence, Slug chauffered him through a succession of sunny and commonplace Hollywood streets until they arrived at the minor business thoroughfare of Western Avenue. Finding a convenient space, Slug parked the car.

Across the street was a three-story building, the lower floors occupied by small stores. Midway of the building was an entrance and stairs leading to the cheap apartments on the upper floors.

"It's straight down the hall on the second floor," said Slug. "The last door on the right."

Cavanaugh discarded the sombrero and bandana. Chances of capture, now were negligible. He put on his Panama and coat. He was in excellent spirits—elastic and athletic-looking in his gray suit with the dark blue tie.

Two young girls in passing glanced at him with interested eyes, but he ignored them.

"Well, so long, Slug. Thanks a lot for everything."

Neither bothered to shake hands.

"Better take me along with you—"

"Two's a party and three's a crowd," grinned Cavanaugh.

"Shall I wait with the car?"

"Absolutely not. I'll be okay—take care of yourself, Slug."

"How about a rod—want to borrow mine?"

"I've got my own," lied Cavanaugh to save argument.

He was not armed because he h i never, at any time felt the need of a weapon. A rod, actually, was not necessary to an agile man with a cool brain. As a means of defense it was uncertain and its powers of accomplishment were nil.

LUCKY PAUSED

"In case you don't come out," said Slug, "how about Miles Laneska? Want me to send her some kind of a message—"

"If I don't come out—just forget everything. But don't worry."

Slug stepped on the starter.

"Well, I'll be seein' you."

"Sure you will."

Cavanaugh carried an atmosphere of extreme well-being with him across the street and several passers-by noticed him with approval. He had the air of a happy young man.

In the entrance he paused and looked negligently at the names of the letter boxes. This was mere idle curiosity. Poleszkis name was not visible—it wouldn't be.

Cavanaugh's mission was not in the least light-hearted, yet he was beginning to feel a physical thrill.

It was like driving a high-powered car over a dangerous mountain road, or staking his last $20 on the wheel, or diving from a high spring board into a pool.

Cavanaugh opened the glass door and started to go up the thinly carpeted stairs. His throat was just a little dry. He was climbing on the balls of his feet. The place smelled a trifle stale. The tenants, quite obviously, cooked at home. An inconspicuous and commonplace hideaway for a man in Poleizki's position. Cavanaugh was whistling softly.

Whenever he was gambling for high stakes he always whistled and kept a level head.

A middle-aged woman with a market basket on her arm passed him on the stairs. He stepped aside, smiled, took off his hat. The woman thought him the nicest young man she had seen in a long time and her day brightened.

Thereafter Cavanaugh did not smile.

He did not know exactly how he would get into Poleizki's apartment. Perhaps the man would not be at home. In that case he would have to commit burglary. To knock on the door and find our would be a simple method. Simple, but superlatively dangerous.

No one could fathom what reaction might be expected from abruptly disturbing a murderous, drug-drenched, abnormal mind . . .

HEART TIGHTENED

At the same moment that Lucky Cavanaugh, with every sense alert, was approaching Poleizki's door, Leni Luneska, in her own elaborate home, was conscious of a frightened sensation around her heart.

As soon as one worry was over another took its place. One wave of anxiety after another. Her life had become a mighty storm of these waves.

It was beyond her comprehension.

For a brief truce with fate she and Cavanaugh had glimpsed a golden peace. It had been so beautifully short—that last brief half-hour together in her bedroom.

FRANCES GOODWIN
MRS. FRANCES GOODWIN, daughter of the Augustus J. Goodwins, is always a regular attendant at all horse events and she is shown with Mrs. Geraldine L. Redmond of New York, who won the early morning ladies' jockey race. This event is one of the biggest features at the annual Eastern Horse Club's event. For the opening of the meet, society leaders turned out in their smartest gowns and the various colors added a picturesque note. This event is one of the outstanding on society's annual program. Photos at the top show the horses in action in two of the races yesterday. (Boston American Photo.)

White and Navy Lead at Races

By Margaret Matson

JUST AS WE EXPECTED, everyone was at the races yesterday, and the clothes were great! All the newspaper people envied us the job of writing them up.

In spite of the chilly breeze that [illegible] brought countless out in woolens, there were plenty of light, summery things being worn. It was a very colorful assemblage, the most colorful, we might say, that we have seen for years. Almost every costume had some touch of white. There were quantities of white hats, white gloves, white bags, shoes and coats. And there were a great deal of navy blue. And these two colors, white and navy, seemed to intensify all the colors about them.

Fabric Berets

Gray and beige were present in [illegible] and many [illegible] and wool have been the [illegible] a few months ago but in the [illegible] there were needed in [illegible] much more practical [illegible] and touched up with a [illegible] white pique [illegible] and hat [illegible] and hat [illegible] And [illegible] was a most [illegible] type of [illegible] colored [illegible] woven with a hand-knitted scarf of string, brown and melon knotted about the throat cowboy fashion.

Hats varied all the way from [illegible] or seven-inch brims to the tiniest forward tilted berets. Any number of linen and pique hats were present. One outstanding fashion which was noted several times on very smartly dressed young women was the fabric beret which is pulled forward over the eyes in a visor-like way. These, like most of the hats, matched some other part of the costumes.

We saw several instances of colored or printed gloves. One young person was daring enough to put a red linen hat, red linen blouse and red linen gloves with a white linen ensemble. Very striking. Another had a boldly checked scarf with gauntlets to match on a dark suit. And another very outstanding alliance was a navy hat, brim-trimmed, stitched with red and accompanied by navy gloves the cuffs of which were also stitched in red. This was worn with a printed gown.

Well Matched

It was difficult to say whether the prints or plain colors were in the majority. Both were plentiful. And some of the most distinguished outfits featured checks, stripes and dots. A black silk ensemble, for instance, sparely populated with small white dots, had white accessories and a row of vivid red buttons down the front. A suit of wool knitted, in checks of gray, raspberry red and navy, with a knitted scarf of the three colors. A beige suit with red and beige checked blouse, bag and hat. And many ensembles all of checks, in silk or wool or cotton.

One of the most noticeable features of the whole array was the [illegible] with which most of the [illegible] had been assembled. Every part had its own bit to contribute and matched some other part. Hats frequently matched the dress or suit. One dress suit particularly was of navy and white printed silk with a matching hood of the same material. Very smart and most effec[illegible]

FOX CONTRACT FOR LEW AYRES

'My Weakness' to Be His First Starring Vehicle After Visit to World Fair

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor, Universal Service
(Copyright, 1933, by Universal Service, Inc.)

Los Angeles, June 16—Lew Ayres is off to the Chicago World's Fair. And what a holiday this boy can enjoy! Just before he took the train, Winfield Sheehan called him into his office and signed him on a long-term Fox contract. Lew becomes a star and if you could hear the plans the Fox Company has for him you'd get a good idea of the importance of this new contract.

Seems Lew made two pictures, "State Fair" and "Common Clay," both of which were box office successes. His first for Fox when he returns from the fair will be "My Weakness," a Lillian Harvey picture and just to this boys and girls, he will be co-starred in this big Rod Desviva number.

New Englanders made Louella O. Parsons it possible for "As the Earth Turns" to rate high in the list of best sellers. The story by Gladys Hasty Carroll deals with life in New England, and according to a bred-in-the-bone New Englander, it's one of the truest stories of that part of the world yet published. Warner Brothers will bring it to the screen with Aline MacMahon, Warren William and Kibbee.

• • •

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., was paged in London today by F. C. Levee. He was asked to return to Hollywood to play the role in "Design for Living" that Noel Coward created on the stage.

• • •

I shall be very relieved when Paramount and George Raft finally make up their minds about George's future. Carey Wilson has been borrowed from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to write an original story called "All of Me" for the boy who made young gangsters popular on the screen.

• • •

You won't believe Billie Burke can be over twenty-eight when you see her in "Dinner at Eight" she is so unbelievably beautiful and so young that if you didn't know how many years she has been on the stage you would say she is too youthful to play Madge Evans' mother. Miss Burke, who has worked steadily since the death of her husband, Florenz Ziegfeld, has just put her name on a contract at Universal.

Snapshots of Hollywood:

MAE MURRAT who introduced VIC MYERS, Lieutenant Governor of Washington, in Hollywood, says it's no romance; the lieutenant governor has a wife and two children and is happily married; EDDIE SUTHERLAND dining in the Vine Street Derby all by his lonesome; the miasma has gone to Honolulu on a vacation; MRS. ALICE WILLIAMSON, well known British author, in the Beverly Derby for supper; FAY WRAY and JOHN MONK SAUNDERS keeping cool on the beach at Playa Del Rey; they have rented the FRANCES MARION house there for the summer; the Plantation opens with a gala night tomorrow night and the film colony will be there; CONRAD NAGEL sends word he will play in stock in New England this summer; ELIZABETH ARDEN gives a dinner at a very, very swank tea given her by MRS. JOHN DAVIS LODGE (FRANCESCA BRAGGIOTTI); seems MISS ARDEN is opening a salon here on June 20; EDDIE HORTON dining with his double—his brother, in Sardi's; EDDIE CANTOR discussing the German-Jewish situation with an interested group of listeners in Sardi's; EDDIE seems to know what it's all about. That's all today.

Louella Parsons' column is one of the regular features of the drama section of the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

June Brewster, one of the many Hollywood beauties in "Melody Cruise," novelly musical comedy coming to RKO B. F. Keith's screen tomorrow. The production was handled by Merian C. Cooper, an ace among directors and producers.

Testimonial to Popular Pair

Special interest to thousands of Boston playgoers attaches to the opening performance of Queene Smith in the new play, "Not a Saint," at the Hollis Monday night, because the event will be in the nature of a testimonial to Joseph P. Cook, manager of the theater, and Paul Spillane, the treasurer.

To stand and observe in the lobby of the Hollis on an opening night is to be impressed with the fact that Joe Cook has a legion of friends. Everybody appears to know him and respond to his cheery greeting, from the mannered patrician to the more effusive business man.

Though young in years, Joe Cook is a veteran in local theater life. He started as a boy at the old Park, when that playhouse was one of the Erlanger chain. Later he became assistant to the late T. B. Lothian at the Colonial, and afterwards was appointed assistant manager under the late Charles J. Rich at the Hollis, a most able theater general and educator of the fine attributes of theater managing.

This excellent training stood Joe Cook in such good stead that when Rich died Joe was given the office, and then was the youngest theater manager in Boston.

Spillane is an ideal box office treasurer whose smile never departs, nor courtesy vanishes. Hence his popularity.

Breaks Records

Breaking all house records during its two weeks' run, "Maedchen in Uniform" is to be held for a third week at the Fine Arts. On the hottest day of the year it was a "sell out," and that day was a new mark for the theater.

VIENNESE NIGHTS GIVEN NOTABLE OPENING

Pierre De Reeder's Orchestra Scores at Opening of New Boston Garden Attraction

By HARRIS MORGAN

Boston Garden is become just that—a garden! For the purpose of Viennese Nights, latest enterprise to brighten the corner of night life in Boston these summer days, the Garden is metamorphosed from arena for fights and the three-ring circuses, into a most attractive oasis of refreshment—music to refresh the ear, flowers and decorations and entertainers to delight the eye, dancing for the terpsichorean joys, and food and drink to refresh the inner man.

• • •

Viennese Nights was given a notable opening last night—attendance was generous, including many prominent persons, and the entertainment, amid cool and charming surroundings, was more than satisfying. We arrived late, but were informed the doors had swung open as per schedule at 6 with dinner concert and dancing until 8. The orchestra is a splendid one of 25 pieces, ably conducted by Pierre De Reeder, former maestro with the Copley Light Opera Company. The programs—there were a number such, the orchestra being kept busy—were varied and tuneful, and the band proves to be a well-knit one of skilled players.

The show is outstanding among cabaret offerings. The talent is fine, and there is excellent variety. Not forgetting that the band's work is in itself a headline feature of real merit, there are solos by Alice Wellman and Wesley Boynton, two pleasing voices, and other specialties are presented.

In the way of a dedication, Director De Reeder led his band through two original numbers by himself, "Meet Me in the Garden, Charlie," a good waltz selection; and an ensemble number entitled "Sweet Sixteeners." This last marked the debut of something new under the sun, a bevy of comely lasses who sing as they serve the food and drink.

Well Balanced Screen Fare Offered

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

The new program at the Paramount and Fenway hands us a "surprise package" in "The Life of Jimmy Dolan," and likewise presents something of a surprise in the Wheeler and Woolsey comedy, "Diplomaniacs," whose nutty yarn makes it one of the best of the series done by those two stars. This is out and out burlesque; but "Jimmy Dolan" gets in the punches on the drama, with plenty of fun tossed in.

• • •

Jimmy is the role of Doug Fairbanks, Jr., the best thing the chip off the Fairbanks block has done on screen. The story begins slowly, then suddenly takes a tangent that is soon holding attention to the speeding camera. Jimmy is a boxer, who in a brawl slays a newspaper man. The fighter's pal dies in an auto crash and the boy is identified as the boxer. Thereafter, Archie Mayo, the director, gets in a fast swing, and interlards his pathos, often poignant, with contagious mirth. To us this is the best of all the pugilistic films, chiefly because it told a simple tale believably and humanly.

The boxer flees and winds up on a ranch. There the lenses become idyllic, sometimes melodramatic, but always convincing. The film begins slowly, but don't let that jar you; stick to your seat, and you will enjoy most of its length. It has high value in that it shows Hollywood is beginning to see the light, and is turning away from the sophisticated type, and doing mighty well again in what it did grandly half a dozen years ago.

Fairbanks is a real actor here; Loretta Young reveals a new style of miming and speech control.

"Jimmy Dolan" is first class audience entertainment, with Direction Mayo putting a new feather in his cap.

"Diplomaniacs" carries Wheeler and Woolsey to Europe, where they crashly break up the Geneva Peace Conference, with hilarious result. It is not a great picture, but is okay for summer sport indoors, in a theater seat.

THE VOICE OF BROADWAY
By LOUIS SOBOL

Out of the Envelopes!

(Merely an Idea of What the Day's Mail Brings In.)

Phillip Waldman, an engraver, forwards a gold coin bearing the features of President Roosevelt on one side and on the reverse a Shield of David with the word "Mazel" (Good Luck) inscribed in Hebrew characters. "This token," he writes, "depicts the new spirit which has entered into the people and seems singularly appropriate at this time as a national greeting signifying the new era. The coin was accepted very graciously by President Roosevelt and other prominent officials throughout the country, and I should deem it a privilege if you would accept this symbolic emblem as a token of my esteem." . . . "Add this to your list of toasts," wires Andy Sanella, "Here's to the inside of a good home and the outside of a good prison." . . . "You mention what we as true Cockneys for which to be a genuine member one has to be born within the sound of Bow Bells rhyming slang as being Australian in origin," protests Charles Deacon, whose letter head proclaims him "By Appointment to H. M. King George V, wood carver and cabinet maker"—"I think you will find it was exported there by the Londoners who have emigrated, as for at least two or three generations they have used it. A few more samples which we used to hear: "Tit for Tat"—hat; 'Storm and Strife'—wife; 'Pot and Pan'—my old man; 'Plates of Meat'—feet; 'Jim Skinner'—dinner."

From Molly Picon, a post card from Moscow, "We're taking in the Theater Festival. Life is gayer than you think here" . . . "You wonder what's becoms of Hannen Swaffer?" writes Jack St. Arnold. "Why, he's still writin', bless your heart, and here are a few of his latest efforts shipped to me from England." St. Arnold enclosed a clipping from John Bull in which Swaffer addresses an open letter to Larwood, the cricketeer, in which he says, among other things: "If other peoples cannot play games the English way—and we all remember Walter Hagen deliberately keeping Abe Mitchell waiting on the tee to give him nerves, and Herman tricking Jimmy Wilde into fighting and being beaten by an overweight man—we should not play them. A game is a game. It should not be allowed to embitter and antagonize." And from a Sunday paper, The People, May 28, a column on film news, including a revue of Maurice Chevalier in "Bedtime Story" in which Hannen says: "Maurice Chevalier, I thought, was more intriguing, more human, more anything than he has been for a year or two. You see, they have been putting him into a lot of sophisticated nonsense, which seems to please the wisecrackers, but which leaves the great public cold."

Barking Dog Summons Aid to Drowning Canine Pal

"Took dog out of well—Folly Hill."

That simple record of the Danvers fire department today failed miserably to tell the story of one dog's devotion to another and events that followed.

The rescued dog was a small fox terrier. It slipped into a 300-year-old well on top of Folly Hill while it scampered with a sleek-haired English setter.

The setter immediately gave an alarm with incessant barks that aroused neighbors over a wide area. Wagging of the tail and repeated barks at the approach of rescuers told the story and it was not long before Fireman William Pearson descended on a ladder to the rescue of the terrier.

ROXBURY GIRLS HURT IN CRASH

Two Roxbury girls riding with an allegedly intoxicated driver were severely injured early today when their car crashed into another at Washington and Beacon sts., Newton.

Alison Clark, 17, of 25 Crawford rd., and Eleanor Joyce, 18, of 5 Sherman st., Roxbury, were the victims, the former suffering a fractured leg and the latter head injuries. They were riding with Robert E. Cullin, 20, of 25 Dunster rd., Jamaica Plain; Charles Lucas of 21 Rodman st., Jamaica Plain, and Philip L. Sullivan of 23 Elmira st., Brighton.

Cullin was not at the scene when police arrived, but was found in a nearby gravel pit and arrested for being intoxicated and driving while drunk. Sullivan was arrested on a charge of intoxication. James S. Caipol of 128 Lincoln st., [illegible] only occupant of the other car, was not hurt.

Youth Near Death in Newton Crash

William G. Mosser, 18, Avalon rd, Waban, was battling death at Newton Hospital today as the result of an accident last night while he was taking his first ride on a new motorcycle, a combined birthday and graduation present.

According to witnesses, the boy crashed into a parked car as he turned from Waban ave. into Nehoiden rd. yesterday afternoon. He was to graduate from the Levi Warren Junior High School Thursday.

Bay State Industries Show Big Labor Increase

Four out the five major industries in Massachusetts increased their number of employes and all five materially increased wages during the month of May, according to a report of Mary E. Meehan, acting commissioner of the state department of labor.

And had it not been for the strike of shoe workers in Lowell, the one industry that failed to gain in the number of employes might have gone over the mark.

Cotton goods increased employment 2.4 per cent and wages 15 per cent; woolen and worsted increased employment 26.3 per cent and wages 37.2 per cent; foundry and machine shop products increased employment 8.9 per cent and wages 18.1 per cent; electrical machinery (including radio) increased employment 21 per cent and wages 33 per cent. Although the boot and shoe industry employed 2.6 per cent less employes, wages were increased 2.1 per cent, according to the report.

TUFTS RELICS OF '83 DUG UP

Mementoes of a June day 50 years ago buried by Tufts class of '83 were dug up out of the campus grounds today by F. Elwood Smith of Chandler st., Somerville, a member of the class.

For 50 years, the leaden chest containing class records, coins, stamps and other souvenirs has lain buried in the Tufts campus and the secret closely guarded by members of the class. The chest was found in excellent condition and will be opened tomorrow at a reunion of the class of '83.

Class day exercises at Tufts opened today with an address to the seniors at their last chapel services by Dr. Lee S. McCollester.

Following the regular class day feature of awarding prizes and the reading of humorous class papers, a baseball game between Boston College and the Tufts nine was scheduled.

Tonight, the seniors will hold their annual class day dance at Goddard gymnasium.

HOLIDAY QUILL GOES TO DORR

If Bunker Hill day is ever made a legal holiday in Suffolk County, credit must go to Frank L. Dorr of Raymond st. who has waged a consistent fight now crowned with partial success.

Gov. Ely signed a bill which provides for submission of the question to the voters of the county on referendum to be held in the near future probably in the next gubernatorial campaign. The quill used was presented to Dorr.

The characteristic advertising of Raymond's was used with telling force to bring the measure through the various stages of enactment in the legislature after it had once been unfavorably reported by a legislative committee.

The domestic help problem is solved by taking a kitchenette apartment, and the best are advertised daily in the For Rent columns.

BOOKS---And a Number of Things

By Charles Hanson Towne

Somerset Maugham has done a very clever thing. He has prepared what he calls a "Travelers' Library," which contains 1700 pages of selections from all sorts of books that have interested him. Always an omnivorous reader Mr. Maugham's taste is here revealed to us; and it is illuminating to see what he has liked as well as to discover, indirectly, what he has disliked. You may remember how, in "Cakes and Ale" he cast out, with no fear, some of the monster classics of his time; how he stated the truth that was in him about many books that had been placed on five foot shelves, and regarded as essential reading for youthful students. In his omnibus which was his own idea, he is equally frank, and if some of his judgments dismay college professors they will meet with ready acquiescence by intelligent and discriminating critics.

* * *

It takes no little courage to say this in the section devoted to poetry, and yet I think Maugham is right.

"In my own life I have seen Fitzgerald's 'Omar Khayyam' lose its magic. It has become a period piece. It has a tinselly, meretricious air like a picture of Gustave Moreau. It has the Orientalism of the Victorian age. Sometimes one can see the process going on before one's eyes. When I was young I thought no poem more beautiful that Matthew Arnold's 'The Scholar Gypsy,' and it is with dismay that I have seen the poetry oozе out of it. I am sadly conscious that it will not be a poem much longer, but no more than scholarly and accomplished verse. Those lines that swung along with such a gallant and romantic bearing now trudge by a little wearily, like trades unionists in a procession whose minds are no longer set on liberty and fraternity but on the tram home to tea. In two or three of the poems I have here collected I seem already to discern signs of dissolution, but they are hinted only here and now. I think they are poems. They have given me delight in the past and they give me delight still. How can I tell what the future will feel about them?"

* * *

That is sincere and astute criticism. Many a rugged and standpat oldtimer will sit up and take notice. He will feel that his ideas have been trod upon—as they certainly have been; but the experience will do him good. For most of us go on accepting certain standardized products in the literary market, fearful of admitting that we think they have lost their flavor.

Let us see what Maugham likes in the realm of poetry. He cares for some of Robert Bridges, for Alice Meynell's imperishable sonnet "Renunciement," for Francis Thompson's "Hound of Heaven," for much of Rupert Brooke and Walter de la Mare, James Elroy Flecker and five of William Butler Yeats' lyrics, including, of course, "The Lake Isle of Innesfree."

* * *

When Maugham comes to discussing prose, and particularly the short story, he has something most interesting to say.

"Length has nothing to do with the case. There is no reason why you should not have a novel in five pages and a short story in 500. I think the short story is something very different from the novel, but it is a difference that many celebrated authors have not realized; or if they have it may be that they have not cared. For example take a celebrated story by Chekov called 'The Lady with the Dog.' Well, to my mind that is not a short story, but a short novel; on the other hand the same author's 'Peasants,' which is about as long, very well fulfils the demands I make of a short story. Some writers write short stories of the length of a novel, and there may not be a word too much in them but they remain short stories. The best example I know of this is Frank Swinnerton's 'Nocturne.'"

He gives "Youth," by Conrad and a long selection from Bennett's "Old Wives' Tale," "Lady Into Fox," by David Garnett, complete, three of Katherine Mansfield's incomparable short stories, including "Miss Brill," one of the most perfect examples I know, and three by Saki (H. H. Munro), as well as many others.

Get this volume, by all means. It is full of rich surprises, and Maugham's running notes are alive, instructive and illuminating.

THIS IS LIFE

Ford's Pride Justified, for He Has Put the World on Wheels

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

R. E. ROGERS

HENRY FORD ANNOUNCES with some justifiable pride that his motor manufacturing company is 30 years old today. Thirty years is a generation. That means that an enormous proportion of our population has never known a world without an automobile. Henry Adams used to believe that 1900 marked a new epoch in civilization because of the discovery of radium by the Curies. More practically, he might have marked his new era by the invention of the cheap motor car. It has affected human life far more than has radium.

Perhaps an even more important anniversary this year is also Henry Ford's. Forty years ago, in 1893, he made his first engine—and it still runs. That first engine has spawned so to speak—21,000,000 other engines and cars.

It is not unfair to say that Henry Ford created the motor age in which we live. Aldous Huxley's amusing and angry book, "Brave New World," describes a world centuries ahead, in which chronology dates from the present. Dates are reckoned from A. F. (Anno Ford) and when a person wishes to take an oath he swears "Good Ford" or "By Our Ford." Well, the years before 1903 might well be termed "B. F." or Before Ford.

Auto Has Revolutionized Travel

Did you ever read that amusing novel, "The Lightning Conductor," by the Williamsons? I remember it chiefly for its pictures of the difficulties of motoring around the year 1900, the abject dependence on expensive foreign cars and their constant, heart-breaking bad behaviour. Before Ford, an automobile was an expensive amusement for the very well-to-do or for those with marked mechanical aptitude. Had the industry remained in that state, railroad and trolley car stock would be a lot more valuable than it is.

What was it that Ford did? He did not merely make a cheap car. He fought the famous Selden patent which claimed a basic control over all internal combustion automotive engineering. He fought it and won. He opened practical automobile manufacturing to all. At the same time he proved that a small car could be both cheap and durable. In the eyes of the great American public his car became the standard by which all the others were measured, both for price and durability. There were still expensive cars. But for 30 years most manufacturers who hoped for large sales have had to approximate the Ford prices. He put America on wheels.

By disturbing the status quo he brought about results which neither he nor anyone else had foreseen. He wished merely to provide cheap transportation. He was perhaps the first to link the idea of service with the idea of mass production. But the results have been unexpected. The automobile has suburbanized the city. It has urbanized the village and the rural district. It has made transportation infinitely mobile. It has set America traveling, has given us the characteristics of a people of many and wide contacts.

Auto Wipes Out Sectional Lines

By mixing east and west and north and south it has helped to standardize us. Today in America St. Paul's dream has come true. We are neither Jew nor Greek nor Barbarian; we are all made in one image. National advertising has helped a lot, but the automobile has probably done more. It has enormously changed our social life. Nearly every "problem" the young folks raise can be traced in one way or another to the motor car. The whole question of Prohibition had been enormously modified and made more difficult in consequence. The fast machine has come to be the chief aid of organized violent crime. One might go on indefinitely.

The results of the cheap automobile may be even more far reaching. Mark Sullivan, that able historian of the past generation, author of "Our Times," seems to think so. Speaking the other day at the Lehigh University Commencement he was considering how far our old American conceptions of "liberty" may have to be modified by new conditions. He used the automobile as his chief illustration:

"I admit at once that it is not practical for the individual in your new generation to have as large a freedom of action as my older generation started out with. Certain changes that have come into the material world have brought with them limitation of freedom of action. Forty years ago there was no such thing as a traffic code. About the only law in this area was not a law at all, but merely a usage, a rough rule of the road, 'turn to the right.'

"And since the horse knew that rule about as well as the driver, traffic went on quite smoothly, with no burden on the driver to maintain a vigilant awareness of lights, signs, and signals, and the penal consequences as well as physical dangers attendant on lapse of attention. The driver, in that happy day, could, if he were of a meditative turn, let the lines he lax, devoting his mind to reflection.

And It Revives Ancient Problem

"And I suspect that the aggregate of reflection thus generated may have had more worth for the nation than the instant responsiveness to outward signs, signals and slogans that is characteristic of the present. In any event, in any far-sized city, a traffic code as large as a small book is testimony to the quantity of regulation of the individual that came into the world with the automobile.

"Associated with the coming of the automobile and accentuating it is another change. The mere fact that there are more of us occupying the same space puts on each one of us the necessity of submitting to regulation. Increased density of population, accompanied by increased speed of motion diminishes freedom of action. I suggest this to some scholar here as the subject for research and thesis. Is it possible that there is a law of physics involved in this? Would it be feasible to reduce this to one of those familiar formulas?

"Density of population multiplied by velocity of each unit equals quantity of regulation the individual must submit to."

In other words, a new application for the old, old puzzle, as old as that of predestination and free will and of much more practical importance, is presented: The puzzle of the proper balance between liberty and regulation, that Blackstone argued over and John Stuart Mill tried to reconcile and is still a matter of disagreement between the President and the Congress.

So Nature works. Henry Ford strove for greater mobility and freedom for the people at large. In the result to be standardization and regulation beyond anything our fathers dreamed of? Not impossible.

There are not many men in history who, whether consciously or not, have brought about such far reaching changes in civilization. Henry Ford is indisputably one of them. The fact that these results have come about without his conscious intention, even against his intention, is not important. The fact remains that he, more than almost any other living man, set in motion the forces that have produced our world today.

Gluttons for Punishment? -:- Can They Take It in the Heart?

MAX SCHMELING — ANNY ONDRA

WILL HE DO BETTER IN LOVE THAN IN RING?

Max Schmeling and Anny Ondra, pretty Berlin film star, believe that their marriage which takes place soon in Germany, will last forever—another great victory for Cupid. But that famous individual, General Averages, can't be counted out so soon. And he says, on past performances, that when a fighter weds a showgirl you can't expect a permanent union.

MAX BAER — JUNE KNIGHT

CAN HE BEAT BROADWAY JINX WITH A RING?

Hailed by many as the next ring champion, Max Baer is slipping a wedding ring on Broadway's June Knight. They, too, face the law of averages handicap in spite of their firm conviction now that love like theirs can never die. So far, the fight's all Cupid's, but old man averages doesn't lose many of these bouts. He usually packs a K. O. punch.

Charlestown Ready for Big Night Before Fete

With three banquets this evening, scores of "open houses" in clubs and private residences, a display of fireworks at the Sullivan sq. playground at midnight and the opening of the three-day carnival at the Sullivan sq. playground, Charlestown will usher in the 158th anniversary of the Battle of Bunker Hill.

National, state and city leaders will be among the speakers at the three "night before" banquets to be held in the district. The community banquet, under the auspices of the City of Boston, will be held in the Charlestown Armory on Bunker Hill st., and it is expected that upwards of 2000 persons will attend.

Gov. Ely, Acting Mayor Joseph McGrath, City Councillor Thomas H. Green are to deliver addresses.

At 11:45 o'clock Gov. Ely and Acting Mayor McGrath will head a parade from the Armory to the Sullivan sq. playground, where a fireworks display will be touched off.

The 41st annual "night before" banquet of the Bunker Hill Council, No. 62, Knights of Columbus, will take place in Knights of Columbus Hall on High st. Grand Knight Thomas A. Flaherty will be the toastmaster.

Clare Gerald Fenerty, district attorney of Philadelphia, will be the principal speaker. Senator David J. Walsh will respond to the toast "The Nation;" Gov. Ely to the "The Commonwealth;" Acting Mayor Joseph McGrath, the "City o' Boston;" Rev Mark C. Driscoll, D.D., chaplain of the Council, "The Church." Representatives of the Army and Navy will respond for thos branches of the service.

Congressman William P. Connor, Jr., of Lynn, will be the principal speaker at the Bunker Hill Post No 26, American Legion, banquet to be held in the Eben D Jordan Gymnasium on High st.

The big feature of the celebration will be the military and civic parade tomorrow afternoon. It is expected that there will be about 6500 men in line of march.

Extra Cars for Holiday Celebrators Tonight

Crowds who visit the Bunker Hil celebration in Charlestown tonight will be given additional Elevated service until 2 a. m., officials of the Boston Elevated Railway announced today.

After the usual night service extra trains will leave Everett station at 1:06, 1:16, 1:36, 1:46 and 1:56 a. m., leaving Sullivan sq for Lictown four minutes later.

Street car and bus service has also been arranged at the various stops, and trains in the East Boston tunnel will run all night.

4 Greater Boston Students Honored

Several Greater Boston students are included in a list of cash prize winners at Harvard for distinguished scholarship. The principle award, the Sumner prize of $450 for the best essay on social science problems, was won by Peter Shuebruk, '33, of Cohasset.

Other winners are Richard Friedman, of Newton Center, $175; Lloyd McKim Garrison prize for poetry; Melvin L. Anshen, '33, of Boston, $50 Harvard monthly prize for literary composition and Ralph E. Shikes, '33, of Brookline, $150 Phillip Washburn prize for best historical essay.

Back Bay Residence Sold

Announcement was made today that Miss Mary B. Lothrop has purchased from the estate of Georgiana S. Cary the four-story residence at 121 Marlborough st., Back Bay. The property is assessed for $32,000.

350 ZIONISTS MEET SUNDAY

Delegates to the number of 350 including a large number from Boston, will attend the 12th annual convention of the New England Zionist Region, of which Asst. U. S. Atty. Elihu D. Stone is president, which opens at the Hotel Bancroft, Worcester Sunday at 10 a. m.

Morris Rothenberg of New York president of the Zionist organization of America and Abraham Goldberg of New York will be guests and deliver addresses. Judge Jacob J Asher Joseph Talsmo and Joseph Goldberg the latter president of the Worcester Zionist district and Asst. U. S. Atty. Stone will be among the speakers. Mayor John C Mahoney of Worcester will welcome the delegates.

A reception and dance in honor of the delegates will be held Saturday evening at the Crystal Ballroom Hotel Bancroft.

The committee in charge of the convention comprises Joseph Goldberg, chairman; Judge Jacob Astor, Herman Caine, Henry W. Dephouse, Saul Feingold, Miss Mildred Hillman, David Katz, Miss Pauline Levenson, Morris Long, Louis V. Smith, Miss Janet Lyons Samuel Magid, A. W. Margolis, Harry Poria, Leonard Seder, Saul Romanoff, A. W. Sapiro, Miss Esther Schwartz, Eli Stone and Joseph Talamo.

Home Loan Measure Offered in House

A bill amending the banking laws to allow Massachusetts banks to take advantage of all provisions of the Home Loan bank laws to aid small home owners in refinancing mortgages was filed with the clerk of the House today by Rep C. F. Nelson Prati of Saugus. The bill provides amendments which will allow banks and credit unions to invest or exchange securities for Home Loan bank bonds.

Both Maxies Face Heavy Odds in Cupid Bouts

New York, June 16—Just what chances have the two Maxes, Baer and Schmeling, to find marital happiness under the grim old law laid down by the grimmer old fatalist, Gen. John J. Averages?

Both of them recently announced their intentions of taking brides. Both drew their fiancees from the ranks of stage beauties. Herr Max will marry that dark-eyed slip of a girl, Anny Ondra, who came out of Czecho-Slovakia to work her way to stardom in the Berlin theatrical world. Max Baer will marry June Knight of Broadway.

General Averages has stacked the cards against them. If they win in their search for a contented married life, it will be against heavy odds.

FACE HEAVY ODDS

For decades the stars of the prize ring have been taking their brides from the estage.

And the unpleasant—but true—statistics show that four out of five of these marriages are failures.

One of the latest, and certainly the most famous of the matches, which went on the rocks, was that of Jack Dempsey and Estelle Taylor. When Jack and Estelle married, those on the inside, who knew a lot more than has ever been printed, said: "Here's one that'll take."

Jack loved Estelle deeply; Estelle loved Jack deeply. There was no doubt about that. Not even the divorce court, where mud-slinging is the order, could change their regard for each other. There was no mud-slinging in this case.

McCOY MARRIED NINE

You might say this was one of those modern things, that this hurdy-gurdy, swift-paced age was responsible. So? Well, dip back into the past. Drag out, say, Kid McCoy. The Kid married three actresses, among his nine wives, and none of them lasted even an encouraging period of months.

You may argue that McCoy was merely a fickle fellow, such as may be found in any walk of life, and that his colleagues should not have their depth of affection gauged by his flightiness. Then how about Bob Fitzsimmons, a man who was determinedly set in his ways?

FITZ'S SECOND QUIT

Bob married two actresses in his lifetime, at different times, naturally. The first died; the second, Julia Gifford, quit him after but a few months.

Not even Gentleman Jim Corbett than whom there was no greater lover of domestic contentment, could make a go of a marriage to an actress. His first wife was Olive Lake, an actress whom he married in Salt Lake City, in 1886. They were divorced nine years later and Jim took another wife, Vera Taylor, not from the stage. With her he lived in perfect accord for 38 years, until his death in her arms.

Convicted of Break Which He Reported

Three weeks ago Howard K. Hanson, 36, of Forest st., South Weymouth, told police thieves had broken into the tool house on the estate of Mrs. Georgiana Dow on Phillips st. and had stolen garden tools.

Today Hanson was found guilty of larceny of the tools, valued at $39.50. He was placed on probation by Judge Avery in Quincy court until August, on condition he return the tools and pay $5 costs

Adams Rose, Planted in 1788, Blooming

The Abigail Adams' rose bush, which Quincy historians avow was planted in 1788 by Abigail Adams, wife of one of the Granite City Presidents, burst into bloom today. Quincy residents annually flock to the Adams Mansion in Adams st. to view and smell the fragrant flowers.

DIVORCED PAIR REACH COURT AGREEMENT

Son of Famous Jurist Sought to Regain Daughter, 12

Echoes of the divorce which separated Francis Choate, scion of the illustrious Choate family, and his wife, Jeanne Heindel, daughter of a Florida judge, four years ago, were anticipated today when the couple appeared in Suffolk Probate Court—the husband to modify the decree and regain custody of his young daughter and the wife theirs to defend her right to continued custody.

But spectators were disappointed. A lobby conference with Judge Dolan, between mother and father, followed by a bench conference in which counsel participated, ended in an amiable modification.

MOTHER KEEPS CHILD

Through it all sat a 12-year-old little girl, Margaret Bowditch Choate, child of divorce, bravely trying to figure the whole affair out.

She sat with her mother, now Mrs. Jeanne H. Whitney, and her foster-father, Herbert Whitney. Not far away, but on a different spectators' bench, sat her father.

After a two-hour conference Judge Dolan entered a decision which slightly modified the original divorce decree, but which still placed custody of the child with the mother.

Choate sought complete custody in his petition, which also charged his former wife with appropriating funds set aside for the welfare of his daughter to her own support and that of her new husband.

CHILD'S TIME DIVIDED

But Judge Dolan decreed the mother could have young Margaret half of the Christmas vacation, the Easter vacation period and for five weeks of the summer vacation, and that the father could see her "at all reasonable times."

The child is not to be removed from the Commonwealth, the court decreed, without permission of the court or until the further order of the court.

The parents also agreed that Margaret is to be entered at the Clark School in Northampton next September

FINANCIAL ARE PROVIDED

The finances governing the support of the child were left to the trust agreement set aside for her by paternal relatives.

When Francis Choate and Jeanne Heindel were married at Gettysburg, Pa., Feb. 27, 1920, members of both families were present at a brilliant ceremony. Mrs. Whitney was only 17 when she married the nephew of Charles F. Choate, famous lawyer, upon his return from the World War.

No Holiday on 4th for Registry

Moving day at the Registry of Motor Vehicles will find clerks and officials working Sundays and the Fourth of July in order that operations at the present location may not be impeded.

A huge mass of records are to be moved from Commonwealth Pier to the New Building of the Department of Public Works on Nashua st., West End. It is expected that the task of moving will be completed on the holiday. Meanwhile the registry will function as usual at the pier.

BEEF LOAF ASPIC

Soak 1 level tablespoon gelatine in ¼ cup cold water for five minutes. In the meantime, save 1 small onion and 1 celery heart and boil for three minutes in 1 cup of highly seasoned stock. Strain, add 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce and pour it on the soaked gelatine. When the mixture begins to thicken, add 1 cup of chopped cold roast beef, ¼ cup of canned pimentos cut in very thin strips and a heaping tablespoon of finely chopped parsley. Turn into a wet loaf mold and chill. Before serving unmold, garnish with crisp lettuce leaves and asparagus tips which have been dipped in French dressing. Slice with a sharp knife when serving.

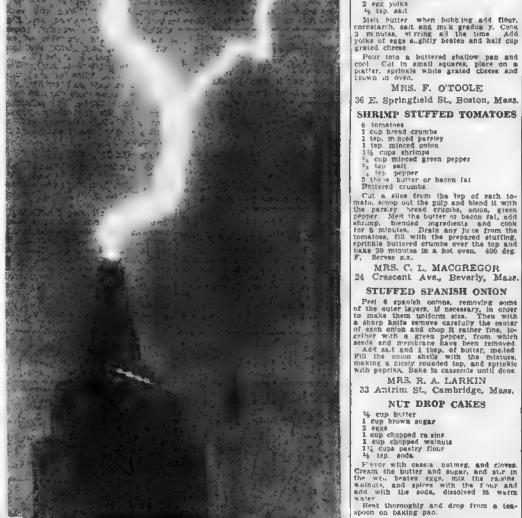
ANGER OF STORM GODS



Storm over Manhattan! To the crashing roll of their thunder drums, the storm gods hurl their lightning lances at the towers man has dared raise to the skies. In a blinding flash of light, the great flame tongues converge to hurl their unit power at the Empire State building. Like some black giant it takes the blow—unscathed. The roar of the thunder dies in defeat. Man's mastery over matter. (International News Photos.)

John F. Fitzgerald on Sunday Advertiser Program Tonight

By N. F. T.

Tonight when the weekly "Boston Sunday Advertiser Speaks" program goes out over New England air waves (WNAC) at 8:15, the voice of Boston's vigorous champion of progress, former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, will be heard. He has in mind a spirited discourse having to do with what current international discussions and recent London developments mean to the average American workday citizen.

* * *

Increased employment based on bigger business and future trading, is the keynote of what Mr. Fitzgerald plans analyzing. Such seemingly involved factors have greatly to do with continued growth and prosperity for the City of Boston and Massachusetts. It is with clear explanation and plain talk that he feels the significance of "New Deal" progress can be best brought home to Bostonians.

* * *

Many years have found John F. Fitzgerald promoting the greater "Port of Boston" idea. His untiring efforts toward increasing activity along the Atlantic ave. waterfront have not been without substantial result. Shipping as an industry herebouts has made marked strides. Many of these forward steps may be traced directly to civic minded measures for which the former Hub mayor is responsible.

Amos 'n' Andy are taking a daytime turn today out in Chicago, heard throughout these parts (WJZ-WBZA) at 3.15, when they dedicate the new huge "sky ride" structure at the Century of Progress Exposition. There's a sky good reason for them doing so, too. It seems the two big towers upon which the big steel framework is constructed have been nicknamed "Amos 'n' Andy" by the workmen Thus the famous radio backface boys have an actual monument erected in their honor at the World's Fair. They appreciate the honor.

WOULD YOU LIKE TO MAKE YOUR LITTLE GIRL'S HAIR CURLY? IT CAN BE DONE

Summer Loves the Hat With Wide Brim

By Margaret Matson

WHEN SOMEONE SPEAKS of a "cartwheel" this summer, she probably isn't speaking of a stunt but a fashion. The cartwheel is one of the newer hats Elizabeth Hawes sensed that a good many months ago, when she stated that in spite of the prevalence of the high hat, the shallow crown was here to stay for some time still.

On the streets, in the shops, at smart restaurants and at teas, one is regaled with a sort of rivalry between the two types the high and the low, the brimmed and the unbrimmed.

All Kinds

Just how the brims seem to be winning out, and indeed they are sparing themselves no effort in doing so. Brims of all sorts from the fragment that forms a visor, to the immense ones of almost umbrella proportions that one sees on the beaches. The cartwheel is perhaps the least seen and the most astonishing.

It is stiff, with a brim all of four or five inches wide, a shallow crown, and it sits straight rather far up on the head. Much like the bicycle hats of the '90's. With it have come all the wider brims, gone drooping, some with unexpected little quirks here and there, some bending a bit under their own weight. And the crowns of these wider brims comprise the very shallow, the higher peaked and draped variety, and the simple unassuming sort that one sees in the photo on the right, the Tuscan straw.

The General Rule

Generally the rule is that the wider the brim, the shallower the crown, though there are a number of exceptions. The narrow brims are likely to be the saucy sailors held on the head by luck or an elastic, or else they are the more dignified type with high draped crowns, much as the dowagers of Beacon Hill have worn for many years.

Straws and fabrics are having a rivalry also, though now and then they come together very harmoniously in a hat that has a crown of one, a brim of the other. Fabrics are somewhat in the lead as it is very smart to have one's hat match her frock, her coat, or some of her accessories.

On the other hand, the Tuscana, the panamas, the ballibuntis, the rough straws and the leghorns are making an excellent showing. Linen is enjoying tremendous popularity.

BRIMS OVERSHADOW ALL OTHER HAT FASHIONS

This summer it's brims—wide ones and narrow ones. At left, Miss Sally Stevens wears one of the newer types in sailcloth—white, with a band of red and white dotted silk on its very shallow crown. Below, Miss Angelina de Marco displays one of the season's favorites in natural color Tuscan straw trimmed with black velvet ribbon.

(For the names of the stores selling these hats, please inquire of Margaret Matson.)

Of the unbrimmed hats, the little circus hat, the crocheted beret, the pique tam, and the summertime fezes of crochet or wash fabrics appear to be the favorites. There are countless of them, and they are so inexpensive that one can have several at the price of a real hat.

THE MARRY-GO-ROUND

Forgotten Words

By HELEN ROWLAND

ONE DIVERSION, which served us to forget how much money we'd lost in 1933, was the pastime of selecting the ten most beautiful words in the English language. That was easy—because you had only to select a Latin derivative—and there you were! Glamorous, glorious, melodious, luminous, dalliance, romance, caress, ardor, lullaby, murmurous, lust. Like THAT . . .

Helen Rowland

But, try to think of the ten ugliest words, and immediately you go Anglo-Saxon or fall into American slang. Try these on your singing-voice — wretch, snooty, hog, swag, grouch, gargles, lousy, blah, snob, goulash, spinach! And I can think of lots even more painful to a poet's ear!

A number of old-fashioned words are being revived these days—"forgotten words," which went completely out of vogue when stock-gambling, racketeering and four-flushing came in and joined the best circles.

For instance, the quaint old word, "honor." Many of the younger generation have never heard the word mentioned, outside of school. They'd have to look it up in the dictionary, if you should ask them what it means. They've got it confused with prestige or distinction or entertainers. Lots of people still think it's more "honor" to be taken up by the smart crowd, than to stand well with their creditors. Or more "honor" to "make" an exclusive club than to make good on a debt or a job or a promise to a friend. And quite "honorable" to get money in any way you can, without going to jail.

Loyalty is another forgotten word, which brings with a whiff from the scornful nose of the ultra-modern. He's never looked it up in the dictionary. Yet loyalty is the most vital quality in the human make-up. A man without loyalty—loyalty to his ideals, his job, his friends and himself—is about as worthless and undependable as a house without a foundation.

Funny — even people who laugh at loyalty in a man—somehow, admire it in a dog!

But, of all the forgotten words, the one that is making the biggest comeback is the much-despised old word "decency." Now, there's a word that most people confuse with "respectability." They imagine it means keeping the front steps clean and the wash-line hidden, keeping your hair cut and hiding the family skeletons in the closet—old-fashioned respectability in the most violent mid-Victorian form.

Yet, when you think about it, decency is a grand old word. It means fair-play, paying your debts, never double-crossing anybody, always being on the level and never making the other fellow feel small. It includes honor, honesty, loyalty, kindliness, cleanliness, good-breeding and self-respect.

And, if you can think of a larger order than THAT, for just one word, I can't!

Print Frock of Lengthening Lines

By MARIAN MARTIN

THERE ARE many reason why the matron will choose this attractive afternoon frock. Its lines and details have been planned to slenderize her figure, create a graceful silhouette for her, and be modish as well. The deep cape is flattering, a surplice bodice and paneled skirt are length-giving and a wise choice of print . . . preferably a light motif on dark ground . . . completes the illusion.

Pattern 9666 may be ordered only in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires 3¼ yards 39-inch fabric. Clear, diagrammed cutting and sewing instructions included with this pattern.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for EACH MARIAN MARTIN pattern.

Send your order to Boston American Pattern Department, 232 W. 18th St., New York, N. Y.

Sixteen Early Enough for 'Dates'

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

Would you be kind enough to answer a few questions for us?

1. At what age would you consider letting a girl have an occasional date alone?

2. What is the difference between petting and necking?

3. When a girl really likes a boy who keeps breaking dates with her for fantastic and unreasonable excuses, what should she do about it?

THE TWINS

Dear The Twins: 1. Not before she is sixteen.

2. My young correspondents tell me there is no difference whatever.

3. If in her place, I should drop him. But some of the patient Griseldas keep right on.

Father's Day Dinner Should Be Made Up of Things He Likes But Doesn't Often Get

By Martha Lee

From Martha Lee's Friday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

WHAT'S FATHER going to have for dinner Sunday? It's HIS day, in all capital letters, and after he's dressed himself up in the new necktie and sampled the cigars, and maybe exercised the gold-plated lawnmower a mother has tactfully provided, he'll be ready for the main event of the day—his Sunday dinner. Let's make it so delicious that he'll brag about it all the rest of the year. Forget the salad that he loathes, and give him fat, fluffy hot biscuits and instead of strawberries in jelly for dessert make him a deep-dish apple pie with a huge wedge of cheese.

Here's what the Lee pater familias is going to eat—and like it we hope. Firstly we're going to pass up the soup that he detests, and the roast that he hates to carve, and let him start right in on a three-inch steak, flanked with heaps of French fried onions.

Have Steak Thick

You'll have to blackjack your butcher into cutting a steak that's that thick but it can be done, and you'll need to allow just 40 minutes for its cooking, providing you've preheated the oven at 350 F. for 15 minutes before putting in the steak. And don't forget to turn it every five minutes, and when you turn it don't stab the fork into its vitals, letting all the precious juices escape—hold it by the fat edge instead.

Commonplace Dessert

For dessert we're going to be very commonplace and have an old-fashioned strawberry shortcake on biscuits, and with oodles of crushed strawberries and very little whipped cream. And last of all, a big cup of coffee with cream and sugar.

After which we expect Father to curl up in the big chair and snore sweetly the rest of the afternoon while the radio broadcasts the ball game fortissimo. Ever try shutting it off and seeing how quickly he'll wake up?

For this one day don't ask him to ferry the family through traffic or wage war on weeds or take the dog to walk. Let him be just plain lazy—in spite of the old gag about every one working but father, we think that the average man is busier than a cat with kittens most of his "day or rest." Personally, we make up a list of "things to be done" all week, waiting for the seventh day to arrive!)

Feed Him Again

After he's gone over the papers again and enjoyed the verboten luxury of a pipe in the living room, feed him again, and don't spare the soda mints.

Some he-man sandwiches and more coffee and a big chocolate cake will not be amiss for supper, and if you've followed this prescription faithfully you may experience the miracle of having him suggest taking you to the movies, all of his own accord, which is our way of thinking would prove that there is some justice in this cold world.

Give my best regards to Daddy—(I've had some of the nicest letters from quite a few, including some firemen way down on the Bay of Fundy), and here's hoping the steak is tender!

Straight Hair Need Not Exist

By Helen Follett

CALL IT THE AGE of miracles if you like. It really is. Few things are impossible these days. Do you remember when you used to cry yourself to sleep because Mazie's hair was curly and yours was disgustingly straight? Well, now when mothers write us and say, "Isn't there some way that I can train a wave into my small daughter's hair?" the answer can be "yes!" Think of it!

Permanent Waves

There are several ways of turning straight hair into curly locks. Many of them you know. If you can afford it—and the child is old enough not to be frightened of the apparatus—you can give small girls permanent waves.

But the way which we should like to inform you about today is almost as effective as a "permanent," less trouble than the curlers, and more lasting than the pins.

The method is this: Purchase a curling fluid—there are a number of them available. Shampoo the child's hair and saturate it with the fluid just as the hairdresser saturates your own hair when he gives you a finger wave. Then for the first several times you work to give the hair "body" and after that you train in the wave.

May Take Month

It might take a month or so to get the hair in condition to start waving it. (Shampoos should not be given more frequently than once each week or at least each five or six days).

To give the hair "body" you rub it around and around, pushing and twirling the hair UP. Continue this until the hair is practically dry. Then don't comb it until the hair is utterly dry.

After the hair seems to perk up and have what we've been calling "body," then you can begin giving finger waves and ringlets or simply pinching in a natural looking wave with the aid of the curling fluid. In this way you train in a curliness which will be very becoming to the child and most gratifying to you. Wonderful, isn't it?

If you should wish to know the names of some good curling fluids, we should be happy to inform you. Address your letters to Helen Follett, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston.

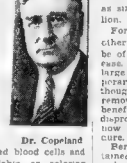
This department is continued every week in the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

QUEER DISEASE OF BLOOD

Unsolved by Science

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

FOR THE past quarter of a century, those interested in diseases of the blood have been studying the problem of erythremia. This disease was first described in 1892 by Vaquez, a physician, and is sometimes called "Vaquez's disease." Erythremia is a chronic disease of the blood in this disturbance there is a marked increase in the red blood cells and in the hemoglobin or coloring matter of the blood. Its cause has never been discovered.



Dr. Copeland

It afflicts men and women, usually late in middle life. Though not hereditary, a number of cases in the same family have been reported. The ailment is slow in its onset and many years may elapse before the victim is aware of its presence.

The disease is first brought to the attention of the sufferer by the peculiar congestion of skin and mucous membrane. The skin assumes a very marked, mottled, brick-red color. This is most apparent on the face, especially the cheeks, nose and ears. The lips are purplish-red or plum colored.

The sufferer complains of fullness in the head, dizziness, irritability, weakness and of nervous disorders. The blood pressure is high and the spleen is greatly enlarged.

The increase in the number of red blood cells is amazing. Normally, a cubic millimeter of blood contains about three and one-half million red blood cells. In this disease it may contain as many as six, eight or even twelve million.

For many years little relief other than by "bleeding" could be offered to victims of this disease. Roentgenotherapy, or large amounts of blood gave temporary relief. At one time it was thought that "splenectomy," or removal of the spleen, would be beneficial. This has since been disproved, and most authorities now strongly oppose this procedure.

Beneficial results have been obtained by the use of X-ray and radium. These methods give more lasting relief. They are the most valuable known means of combatting this strange malady.

Correct Linen to Use on Table

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

My husband and I will be in Panama for quite a while, and I want to buy all the linen that I can possibly afford, as it is very reasonable there.

They have lovely tablecloths trimmed with lace, also inserted with lace. My husband thinks we should not use them, even on special occasions. I think it is perfectly proper to use them, and will be anxiously awaiting your reply.

L.

Tablecloths trimmed with lace or with lace insertion are very popular now, and very fashionable. They make a beautiful background for a table setting, both for formal and informal luncheons, and for all kinds of informal dinners. Indeed, I think that they are one of the most convenient kind of table coverings to own, for they have a way of adapting themselves to many kinds of settings, and to many kinds of decorations, and to many kinds of room interiors.

COMMODITIES AND BONDS COMPARED

Since April 15 commodity price averages have risen anywhere from 10 to 25 per cent. Cotton has been up at least 36 per cent, wheat 19 per cent, copper 45 per cent and ... That means that ...

Now what about bonds? ... a good many speculative bonds ... It is rather hard to find any ... bonds for example when during the past year ... have been ... speculative ... But speculative bonds move ... as stocks do. They do not represent real investment buying.

When you select some really ... grade issues which have not been depressed by fear of default you find very little change. I have picked a group of 13 very high-grade issues as having coupon rates of 4 to 5 per cent and selling over par. I find that they rose only 1.6 per cent between April 13 and June 10.

And remember, during that same time the dollar fell 20 per cent and stocks rose 20 to 50 per cent.

A fair sample of the bonds I ... as follows:

Am Tel & Tel Co. 5	102	1..
Ches & Oh Conso. 5	10..	1..
Con Prod Ref'g 5	102	1.2

Evidently this slight rise ... due ... less liquidating pressure rather than for investment buying. This is the more remarkable in that the artificial policy of easy money has sent money rates so low that even these issues yield far more than the cost of funds.

But as I have tried to ... this article ... to show that the ... of bonds does not indicate the absence of inflation nor of fear of the dollar. Bonds which have ... might have been speculative. In fact, there are plenty of ordinary ... pretty good 5 per cent bonds still ... in the seventies. The helpless holders of the really "safe" ... have seen their real value go down 20 per cent since we abandoned the gold standard, while the paper prices of their bonds have risen less than 2 per cent.

In ... this, I say nothing about the high artificial market made by the government for its own bonds.

BUSINESS GAIN HAS BACKLOG OF STRENGTH

By FRANK H. MELOON

New England's business gain, which continues has a backlog of strength that is in some quarters overlooked. This is pointed out by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. study, which calls special attention to the large volume of forward orders which have been accumulated by mills and factories, sufficient to enable them to operate at current rate well into the summer.

* * *

Note that President Ernest N. Hood of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers will ... headquarters in the Boston Chamber of Commerce Building, expresses the belief that New England cotton mills, operating under the industrial recovery act just enacted will have their best opportunity in more than 12 years to compete with mills in other sections of the country and to obtain their share of the business. Mr. Hood is of the opinion that work for thousands now unemployed is near.

Ernest N. Hood

Higher dividends for can shares are being talked of as possible this year. The street hears Continental Can Co. is benefiting handsomely by the business upturn, and that it is likely that in addition to the current dividend rate of $2 annually an extra of 25 to 50 cents may be declared later in the year. In June 1932 Continental Can directors reduced the dividend basis from $2.50 annually to $2.

Continental had $13,177,989 in cash at the end of 1932. Recovery in American Can Co.'s business should establish safety of the present $4 annual dividend rate on the common, on which earnings for 1932 amounted to $3.26 a common share.

* * *

New England building statistics furnished me today by F. W. Dodge Corp. show another gain. Total of contracts awarded for the week ended June 13 was $2,739,400 comparing with the weekly average for the year to date of $1,558,900.

BOSTON STOCKS ARE LOWER

Leading shares were worked lower in late trading on the Boston Stock Exchange today with losses ranging from fractions to more than 3 points. The list rallied at the opening but started to decline when fairly large scale sell orders appeared in the second period.

American Telephone maintained but a minor fraction of an early rise of over 2 points. Edison Electric sagged more than 3 points. New England Telephone lowered 2 points and General Electric was down more than a point. Eastern Gas & Fuel prior preferred was down more than 2 points.

Atchison dropped more than a point and Boston & Providence was off 2. Maine Central moved against the general trend advancing slightly more than a point. Northern N. H. sagged about 2 points.

Losses ranging from fractions to 2 points or more appeared for Anaconda Copper, First National Stores, Gillette, Granby, Mergenthaler, Nash Motors and Sullivan Machine. Swift International was down 3 points. Warren Brothers was about a point higher.

Frigidaire Sales Enjoy Good Gain

Dayton, O., June 16—Household refrigerator sales by Frigidaire Corp., subsidiary of General Motors, were 42 per cent. higher in dollar volume in May than in the same month in 1932, according to E. G. Biechler, president. The company's two Dayton plants now are running at peak schedule with 10,000 persons employed. June production of household models will be the greatest in the corporation's history.

Railroads Valued at $21,241,711,081

Washington, June 16 (AP)—The nation's railroads were estimated today to be worth at going prices, approximately $21,241,711,081. The Interstate Commerce Commission is considering the question of whether freight rates shall be reduced throughout the country.

Closing on London Exchange Is Mixed

London, June 16. The closing was mixed on the Stock Exchange here today. Speculative issues were subjected to profit-taking, while ... late dealings gilt-edged issues hardened. In Paris the closing was heavy. The list in Berlin ended lower.

—SPECTATOR— Says:

Some sort of rally is likely. One unfavorable factor is that too much speculation has been going on, as evidenced in the steady rise of brokers' loans. With sterling stabilized around $4, at least this piece of "bad news" will be out of the way.

1926 Level

The big factor behind the hullaballoo of the last two months has been the program to put prices back to the 1926 level . . . On this basis, traders had been figuring 125 on the averages, and undoubtedly brought all this speculative buying . . . At that, though, prices should be higher in the late summer and fall, when the industrial recovery bill is going full blast.

Two stocks to watch are Chrysler and N. Y. Central. Canadians are buying Imperial Oil on the curb . . . Standard of N. J. and Sun Life have a big interest in Imperial.

Here and There

Speculators who have been turning thumbs down on sell slips must have been scrambling for them before the close . . . Leonor F. Loree will receive the honorary degree of doctor of engineering from Rensselaer Polytechnic tomorrow.

Washington will have to do something to prevent a crack in commodity prices.

Wall Street is beginning to call the London economic parley the "century of no progress exposition."

Penn R. R. Earnings Are "In the Black"

New York, June 16 (AP)—Pennsylvania Railroad's June earnings will put the road "in the black" for the first six months of this year, says W. W. Atterbury, president. Traffic improvement has been most noticeable in freight.

Foreign Exchanges

Demand sterling, $4.07⅛. Lire, 6.29 cts. Franc, 4.73 cts. Montreal, 89 cents.

TODAY'S NEWS OF WALL ST. LEADERS

THOSE rather new fast tickers having shown themselves frequently unable to keep up with the boiling markets of 1933, plans are being considered for "putting quotations with still greater speed. One proposition is for "express" tickers to give the principal st... while another carries the re... the list.

General Mills Is Bought on Betterment

There has been buying of General Mills following the completion of some fairly large liquidation from institutional sources. The company's business is understood to have improved materially ... cently.

Baking Industry Has Improvement

Difficulties of the baking industry were reflected in the cut ... General Baking from $2 to $1 rate for common dividend. While business has improved in recent weeks the most important factor in recovery of earnings will be the operation of the industrial control bill permitting stabilization of prices.

Further Advances in "Gas" Expected

Further advances in gasoline by Standard Oil Co. of New York and Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey are likely shortly. Oils are widely expected to be in the van of the next good climb.

Workers to Share Rule of Republic

New York, June 16—Republic Steel Corp. announces a plan whereby employes will have a share in directing its business. It will give employes a voice in the management and opportunity of suggesting improvements and airing possible grievances.

Gossip About People You Know

STONE FIGHT MONDAY

Senators ... Madden and Edward ... regarded as two of the strongest defenders of Judge Arthur P. Stone in the upper branch. The vote on the removal of Judge Stone will be taken in the Senate next Monday.

BAZELEY CRIPPLED

William A. L. Bazeley, one of the members of the state liquor control commission has pulled a tendon in his shoulder and is wearing his arm in a sling as a result.

RUDNICK FOR COUNCIL

I. Harris Rudnick, a member of the senior class at Boston College law school and son of Samuel Rudnick, prominent real estate man, will be a candidate for City Council in Ward 12, Roxbury, his friends announced in City Hall today.

ONE-MAN HOLIDAY

In last Tuesday's election, a voter in Precinct 2, Ward 15, Dorchester, held a little referendum all by himself on the question of making June 17 a legal holiday. He wrote in the question and then voted "yes." This question will be voted on by the people of Suffolk County at the next State election, a bill authorizing such a referendum having been passed by the Legislature and approved by Governor Ely.

GARRITY MAY RUN

South End gossip has it that Edward C. Garrity, theater manager of that district will be a candidate for City Council in Ward 3 next fall. It is said that if he enters the fight he will have the endorsement of Democratic groups of both the North and South sections of the ward.

WORKING FOR SEGAL

Friends of Irving Segal, one of the most active members of the Hendricks Club of the West End are circulating a petition which they plan to present to officers of the organization requesting that they give his candidacy for City Council in Ward 3 their endorsement.

STOCK PRICES SHOW GAINS AT CLOSE

New York, June 16—Stocks in Wall St. were decidedly erratic in their movements today. An early attempt to recover yesterday's losses was met by renewed offerings which carried prices off fractions to more than 2 points, but the list again firmed in late trading with a number of the leaders again staging sharp rebounds.

American Telephone rose about 4 points while U. S. Steel, National Distillers, Chrysler, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Allied Chemical, American Smelting and Santa Fe were up 1 to around 3. Transfers approximated 5,800,000 shares.

LEADERS SUPPORTED

Strong support was thrown into the market for leaders from time to time. The dollar lost ground in terms of foreign exchange. As rallies and declines followed one another in rapid fire fashion, it was noticeable that volume expanded on the drops.

Commodities moved indecisively. Wheat, corn and cotton moved sluggishly lower at one time, then came back with stocks. They subsequently drifted into irregular channels. Bar silver continued to sag, losing ¼ of a cent an ounce at 35¼ cents. Bonds of the secondary classes were rather heavy, but the higher grade loans were fairly steady.

In mid afternoon dealings stocks that managed to get back fractions to around 2 points included American Telephone, Allied Chemical, du Pont, Johns-Manville, U. S. Steel, Consolidated Gas, Standard Oil of New Jersey, American Smelting, International Harvester, Sears Roebuck, Case, U. S. Smelting, General Motors and Columbia Gas.

The mining stocks were nervous, Homestake dropping 14 points at one time to 201. Only a few days ago this issue sold at 250. Although Union Pacific and Santa Fe showed some resistance, the rails generally were indifferent.

Of encouragement to the "long-pull" investment contingent were reports of further increases in wages and employment which, to the investor, mean the steady growth of purchasing power which has been limping badly for the past three years.

Up to recently the rising trade barometer has been due largely to the rush by factories, wholesalers and heavy manufacturers to build up inventories and complete forward purchasing in order to forestall higher prices. Reports from retail lines now show that public consumption is beginning to take hold.

Continuing its forward movement, business has so far given no indications of the usual seasonal slackening, said the Dun & Bradstreet Review today.

"With the way now prepared for the administration to launch its industrial partnership program, more than 75 industries nearly have completed the drafting of codes of fair competition and measures to permit the raising of prices and the stabilization of pay levels, many trade associations have been reorganized completely in order to provide an efficient unit to be directed by the government in readjusting the most unusual economic situation confronted in the country's history," said today's review.

"Confidence is expressed that a way finally has been reached to overcome the handicaps to progress arising from destructive competition allied with overproduction and culminating in price demoralization."

Baldwin Locomotive Bookings Show Gain

Philadelphia, June 16—Business booked by Baldwin Locomotive Works and affiliated companies for May was $732,000, against $538,618 in April and $473,000 in May, 1932. This is the first time consolidated orders have shown an increase over corresponding month of preceding year since November, 1931. Bookings for five months are $2,771,000, against $3,463,000 a year before.

Shipments in May on consolidated basis were $504,000, against $458,000 in April, and $1,283,000 in May, 1932. For five months shipments were $2,738,000, against $5,576,000 a year before.

Cotton Higher in New York Trading

New York, June 16—Cotton futures recovered half of yesterday's $2 a bale loss on the Cotton Exchange today. With Liverpool cables 8 to 12 American points higher than due, the market here opened up 12 to 18 points and late prices were up 17 to 20 points, with July up 20 at 9.05, October up 17 at 9.30 and December up 19 at 9.45.

Grains Are Lower in Chicago Market

Chicago, June 16—Grain futures were generally lower today. Wheat was down ⅜ to ⅝c, corn ⅛ to ⅜c off and oats ⅛ to ¼c advanced. Wheat—July 74, Sept 76⅜-⅝, Dec. 78⅞. Corn—July 44⅜-⅞, Sept. 48⅜-½, Dec. 50⅜-⅝. Oats—Sept. 30¼-⅜, Dec. 31⅞-32.

Advertising Lifts Payroll to New Peak

By B. C. Forbes

[illegible]

Yes, great is the power of advertising.

Adv[illegible] used [illegible] and [illegible] men [illegible] Geo[illegible] Ayer [illegible]

"Today the advertiser and the potential advertiser have a quickening market, a low advertising cost, and better advertising. They have, too, another salient factor in their favor—consumer attention . . . This is the time when the businesses of the future are having their birth—the time to advertise to a public that has learned that a price tag does not mean value. It is the time for a sound, courageous and forceful attack on waiting markets."

President E. G. Grace of Bethlehem [illegible] with [illegible] reasoned views and [illegible]

"Beginning in March, after a period of nine months of approximately 15 per cent capacity demand, the steel industry has been enjoying a gradually increasing volume, permitting the stepping-up of operations to well above 35 per cent, with some mills in particular lines operating at considerably higher capacity.

"This increase has reflected a very general character of buying. It has taken place without any pick-up in demand from the railroads or building activities, which together in the past have taken as high as 40 per cent of the industry's production.

"The improved situation has materially helped one very important factor, namely, maintaining the earning power of our employees. The extremely low rate of production created a severe economic problem for working forces. It is most gratifying to see so quickly the improved condition of our men through the additional working time and increased earnings.

"If demand continues to increase and holds its gains, then we are definitely on the way out of our major difficulties."

Encouraging, isn't it?

Midland Steel Co. Business Improves

Coincident with announcement of a quarterly dividend declaration of $1 on the preferred, which is the same amount paid in the previous quarter, E. J. Kulas, president of Midland Steel Products Co., states that the company was enjoying a large increase in business. He said that the Detroit plant was operating at capacity and the Cleveland plant considerably ahead of any recent schedules.

COMMODITIES AND BONDS COMPARED

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, June 16—Some [illegible] [illegible] inflation.

[illegible]

Others say that while there may [illegible] inflation [illegible] and does not [illegible] bonds and [illegible]

[illegible] Inflation is actually with us, and high grade bonds are not up. They [illegible]

[illegible] and that is just another way of saying that commodity prices are higher.

Since April 15 commodity price averages have risen anywhere from 10 to 20 per cent. Cotton has been up at least 36 per cent, wheat 19 per cent, copper 45 per cent and [illegible] per cent. That means that [illegible] less. It has depreciated in purchasing power. Prices in dollars are up because dollars are down in value.

Now what about bonds? First, we must note that more "bond averages contain a good many speculative bonds. It is rather hard to find any railway bonds for example, which during the past year have not been obviously speculative. But speculative bonds move much as stocks do. They do not represent real investment buying.

When you select some really high grade issues which have not been depressed by fear of default you find very little change. I [illegible] a group of 13 very high-grade issues all having coupon rates of 4 to 5½ per cent and selling over par. I find that they rose only 1.6 per cent between April 13 and June 10.

And remember during that same time the dollar fell 20 per cent and stocks rose 20 to 50 per cent.

A fair sample of the bonds I used is as follows:

Am Tel & Tel Col 5	103¾	105
Ches & Oh Consol 5	102	105
Corn Prod Ref'g 5	102	102½

Evidently this slight rise is due to less liquidating pressure rather than to investment buying. This is the more remarkable in that the artificial policy of easy money has kept money rates so low that even these issues yield far more than the cost of funds.

But all I have tried to do in this article is to show that the action of bonds does not indicate the absence of inflation nor of fear of the dollar. Bonds which have risen much have been speculative. In fact, there are plenty of ordinarily good 5 per cent bonds still selling in the seventies. The helpless holders of the really "safe" bonds have seen their real value go down 20 per cent since we abandoned the gold standard, while the paper prices of their bonds have "risen" less than 2 per cent.

In all this, I say nothing about the highly artificial market made by the government for its own bonds.

Double Ticker Is Being Considered

Western Union Telegraph Co. is notifying subscribers to its New York stock ticker service that the New York Stock Exchange is considering a plan for an "express" ticker service in New York city, designed to provide the quotations on only as many stocks as can be quoted without substantial delay.

Another ticker service would carry the complete market as at present, including the quotations which are given on the "express" tickers, with whatever delays the volume may involve. When the total volume is not in excess of the ticker's capacity both systems would deliver the identical quotations.

—STATE ST.— Hears:

That the district is chanting a dirge for the late rally in the share and commodity markets. It is all over, and if one listens to some of the boys it will never happen again. Perhaps, but we want to place a small wager that it will happen all over again on just as grand a scale. All the reliable signs say we are in a bull market and a brief interlude of selling will not alter the situation. The temptation to short stocks is strong, but should be resolutely denied.

Speed

The [illegible] with which things are happening is amazing. Last Sat[urday] [illegible] the idea of a blow-off in the [illegible] active. On Tuesday [illegible] highs were set all around and [illegible] looked as though it were taking place Wednesday, after a dip a partial recovery fell short of the top and the selling looked [illegible].

This way the liquidation [illegible] started to act somewhere and prices melted. In fact they melted so fast that it is only a step to the first reliable resistance. A good rebound could easily take place from the 85 level on the industrial index and 39¼ on the rail compilation.

Secondary Reaction

From present appearances we are in a full-fledged secondary reaction. Usually these last from four to eight weeks. Judgment on this will be more safely rendered as the first recoil develops. Refusal to penetrate 91-92 on a snap-back would be a good tip to get out if stops were neglected early this week.

We are not attempting to spin a fairy tale when we admit the chance of a quick return to an uptrend. The secondary reaction is the logical theory. But a decisive break through the resistance noted would certainly suggest a change of a move. Say to 120 and 60 should come back. H. E. B.

Gossip About People You Know

STONE FIGHT MONDAY

Senators William Madden and Edward Carroll of Boston are regarded as two of the strongest defenders of Judge Arthur P. Stone in the upper branch. The vote on the removal of Judge Stone will be taken in the Senate next Monday.

BAZELEY CRIPPLED

William A. L. Bazeley, one of the members of the state [illegible] control commission, has pulled a tendon in his shoulder and is wearing his arm in a sling as a result.

RUDNICK FOR COUNCIL

I. Harris Rudnick, a member of the senior class at Boston College law school and son of Samuel Rudnick, prominent real estate man, will be a candidate for City Council in Ward 12, Roxbury, his friends announced in City Hall today.

ONE-MAN HOLIDAY

In last Tuesday's election, a voter in Precinct 2, Ward 15, Dorchester, held a little referendum all by himself on the question of making June 17 a legal holiday. He wrote in the question and then voted "yes." This question will be voted on by the people in Suffolk County at the next State election, a bill authorizing such a referendum having been passed by the Legislature and approved by Governor Ely.

GARRITY MAY RUN

South End gossip has it that Edward C. Garrity, theater manager of that district, will be a candidate for City Council in Ward 3 next fall. It is said that if he enters the fight he will have the endorsement of Democratic groups of both the North and South sections of the ward.

WORKING FOR SEGAL

Friends of Irving Segal, one of the most active members of the Hendricks Club of the West End, are circulating a petition which they plan to present to officers of the organization requesting that they give his candidacy for City Council in Ward 3 their endorsement.

Frigidaire Sales Enjoy Good Gain

Dayton, O., June 16—Household refrigerator sales by Frigidaire Corp., subsidiary of General Motors, were 42 per cent higher in dollar volume in May than in the same month in 1932, according to E. G. Biechler, president. The company's two Dayton plants now are running at peak schedule with 10,000 persons employed. June production of household models will be the greatest in the corporation's history.

BUSINESS GAIN HAS BACKLOG OF STRENGTH

By FRANK H. MELOON

New England's business gain, which continues, has a backlog of strength that is in some quarters overlooked. This is pointed out by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., study which calls special attention to the large volume of forward orders which have been accumulated by mills and factories sufficient to enable them to operate at current rate well into the summer.

* * *

Note that President Ernest N. Hood of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers will [make his] headquarters in the Boston Chamber of Commerce Building [and] expresses the belief that New England cotton mills operating under the industrial recovery act just enacted will have their best opportunity in more than 12 years to compete with mills in other sections of the country and to obtain their share of the business. Mr. Hood is of the opinion that work for thousands now unemployed is near.

Higher dividends for can shares are being talked of as possible this year. The street hears Continental Can Co. is benefiting handsomely by the business upturn, and that it is likely that in addition to the current dividend rate of $2 annually an extra of 25 to 50 cents may be declared later in the year. In July 1932, Continental Can directors reduced the dividend basis from $2.50 annually to $2.

Continental had $13,177,989 in cash at the end of 1932. Recovery in American Can Co.'s business should establish safety of the present $4 annual dividend rate on the common, on which earnings for 1932 amounted to $3.26 a common share.

* * *

New England building statistics furnished me today by F. W. Dodge Corp. show another gain. Total of contracts awarded for the week ended June 13 was $2,739,400, comparing with the weekly average for the year to date of $1,558,900.

BOSTON STOCKS ARE LOWER

Leading shares were worked lower in late trading on the Boston Stock Exchange today with losses ranging from fractions to more than 3 points. The list rallied at the opening but started to decline when fairly large scale sell orders appeared in the second period.

American Telephone maintained but a minor fraction of an early rise of over 2 points. Edison Electric sagged more than 3 points. New England Telephone lowered 2 points and General Electric was down more than a point. Eastern Gas & Fuel prior preferred was down more than 2 points.

Atchison dropped more than a point and Boston & Providence was off 2. Maine Central moved against the general trend advancing slightly more than a point. Northern, N. H., sagged about 2 points.

Losses ranging from fractions to 2 points or more appeared for Anaconda Copper, First National Stores, Gillette, Granby, Mergenthaler, Nash Motors and Sullivan Machine. Swift International was down 3 points. Warren Brothers was about a point higher.

Railroads Valued at $21,241,711,081

Washington, June 16 (AP)—The nation's railroads were estimated today to be worth, at going prices, approximately $21,241,711,081. The Interstate Commerce Commission is considering the question of whether freight rates shall be reduced throughout the country.

Closing on London Exchange Is Mixed

London, June 16—The closing was mixed on the Stock Exchange here today. Speculative issues were subjected to profit-taking, while in late dealings gilt-edged issues hardened. In Paris the closing was heavy. The list in Berlin ended lower.

—SPECTATOR— Says:

Some sort of rally is likely. One unfavorable factor is that too much speculation has been going on, as evidenced in the steady rise of brokers' loans. With sterling stabilized around $4, at least this piece of "bad news" will be out of the way.

1926 Level

The big factor behind the hullaballoo of the last two months has been the program to put prices back to the 1926 level . . . On this basis, traders had been figuring 125 on the averages, and undoubtedly brought all this speculative buying . . . At that, though, prices should be higher in the late summer and fall, when the industrial recovery bill is going full blast.

Two stocks to watch are Chrysler and N. Y. Central. Canadians are buying Imperial Oil on the curb . . . Standard of N. J. and Sun Life have a big interest in Imperial . . .

Here and There

Speculators who have been turning thumbs down on sell slips must have been scrambling for them before the close . . . Leonor F. Loree will receive the honorary degree of doctor of engineering from Rensselaer Polytechnic tomorrow.

Washington will have to do something to prevent a crack in commodity prices.

Wall Street is beginning to call the London economic parley the century of no progress exposition."

Penn R. R. Earnings Are "In the Black"

New York, June 16 (AP)—Pennsylvania Railroad's June earnings will put the road "in the black" for the first six months of this year, says W. W. Atterbury, president. Traffic improvement has been most noticeable in freight.

TODAY'S NEWS OF WALL ST. LEADERS

THOSE rather new fast tickers having shown themselves frequently unable to keep up with the boiling markets of 1933, plans are being considered for "putting [out] quotations with still greater speed. One proposition is for "express" tickers to give the principal st[ocks] while another carries the re[st of] the list.

General Mills Is Bought on Betterment

There has been buying of General Mills following the completion of some fairly large liquidation from institutional sources. The company's business is understood to have improved materially recently.

Baking Industry Has Improvement

Difficulties of the baking industry were reflected in the cut of General Baking from $2 to $1 rate for common dividend. While business has improved in recent weeks the most important factor in recovery of earnings will be the operation of the industrial control bill permitting stabilization of prices.

Further Advances in "Gas" Expected

Further advances in gasoline by Standard Oil Co. of New York and Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey are likely shortly. Oils are widely expected to be in the van of the next good climb.

Workers to Share Rule of Republic

New York, June 16—Republic Steel Corp. announces a plan whereby employes will have a share in directing its business. It will give employes a voice in the management and opportunity of suggesting improvements and airing possible grievances.

STOCK PRICES SHOW GAINS AT CLOSE

New York, June 16—Stocks in Wall St. were decidedly erratic in their movements today. An early attempt to recover yesterday's losses was met by renewed offerings which carried prices off fractions to more than 2 points, but the list again firmed in late trading with a number of the leaders again staging sharp rebounds.

American Telephone rose about 4 points while U. S. Steel, National Distillers, Chrysler, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Allied Chemical, American Smelting and Santa Fe were up 1 to around 3. Transfers approximated 5,600,000 shares.

LEADERS SUPPORTED

Strong support was thrown into the market for leaders from time to time. The dollar lost ground in terms of foreign exchange. As rallies and declines followed one another in rapid fire fashion, it was noticeable that volume expanded on the drops.

Commodities moved indecisively. Wheat, corn and cotton moved sluggishly lower at one time, then came back with stocks. They subsequently drifted into irregular channels. Bar silver continued to sag, losing ⅛ of a cent an ounce at 35¼ cents. Bonds of the secondary classes were rather heavy, but the higher grade loans were fairly steady.

In mid-afternoon dealings stocks that managed to get back fractions to around 2 points included American Telephone, Allied Chemical, du Pont, Johns-Manville, U. S. Steel, Consolidated Gas, Standard Oil of New Jersey, American Smelting, International Harvester, Sears Roebuck, Case, U. S. Smelting, General Motors and Columbia Gas.

The mining stocks were nervous, Homestake dropping 14 points at one time to 201. Only a few days ago this issue sold at 250. Although Union Pacific and Santa Fe showed some resistance, the rails generally were indifferent.

Of encouragement to the "long-pull" investment contingent were reports of further increases in wages and employment which, to the investor, mean the steady growth of purchasing power which has been limping badly for the past three years.

Up to recently the rising trade barometer has been due largely to the rush by factories, wholesalers and heavy manufacturers to build up inventories and complete forward purchasing in order to forestall higher prices. Reports from retail lines now show that public consumption is beginning to take hold.

Continuing its forward movement, business has so far given no indications of the usual seasonal slackening, said the Dun & Bradstreet Review today.

"With the way now prepared for the administration to launch its industrial partnership program, more than 75 industries nearly have completed the drafting of codes of fair competition and measures to permit the raising of prices and the stabilization of pay levels, many trade associations have ben reorganized completely in order to provide an efficient unit to be directed by the government in readjusting the most unusual economic situation confronted in the country's history," said today's review.

"Confidence is expressed that a way finally has been reached to overcome the handicaps to progress arising from destructive competition allied with overproduction and culminating in price demoralization."

Baldwin Locomotive Bookings Show Gain

Philadelphia, June 16—Business booked by Baldwin Locomotive Works and affiliated companies for May was $732,000, against $558,618 in April and $473,000 in May, 1932. This is the first time consolidated orders have shown an increase over corresponding month of preceding year since November, 1931. Bookings for five months are $2,771,000, against $3,463,000 a year before.

Shipments in May on consolidated basis were $504,000, against $458,000 in April, and $1,283,000 in May, 1932. For five months shipments were $2,758,000, against $5,576,000 a year before.

Cotton Higher in New York Trading

New York, June 16—Cotton futures recovered half of yesterday's $2 a bale loss on the Cotton Exchange today. With Liverpool cables 8 to 12 American points higher than due, the market here opened up 12 to 18 points and late prices were up 17 to 20 points, with July up 20 at 9.05, October up 17 at 9.30 and December up 19 at 9.45.

Grains Are Lower in Chicago Market

Chicago, June 16—Grain futures were generally lower today. Wheat was down ⅜ to ⅝c, corn ⅛ to ¾c off and oats ⅛ to ¼c advanced. Wheat—July 74, Sept. 76⅜-⅝, Dec. 78⅞. Corn—July 44⅜-½, Sept. 48⅛-¼, Dec 50⅜-⅝. Oats—Sept. 30¼-⅜, Dec 31⅞, 32.

My gal is an angel—
She knows when and how
To rub out the wrinkles
From my tired brow.
She would toil and struggle
All her life, no doubt,
If a sudden turn of fate
Knocked me down and out;
Still yet I'm puzzled—
I would like to know
Why, when Gable's on the screen,
She gasps "Ah!" and "Oh!"
Yet when Mistress Harlow
Appears in low-cut gown,
My wife sits there sulking
With an outraged frown,
And if I suggest we
See the picture twice
My wife answers, "No you don't!"
In accents cold as ice.

Henri DeGlane Writes Out to Regain Title Tells Why He Will Win

Father's Day Sunday Give Dad a Big Hand Also Some Gift

By JACK CONWAY

MR. BOSTON

I have received an interesting letter from Henri DeGlane, great French wrestler who is training at Camp Riopel, 80 miles outside of Montreal, for his world's championship match with Ed Don George which will be held at the Boston Garden on next Friday night.

"I received your letter in which you asked me to give my reasons why I believe I shall conquer George. I have shown this letter to Lucien Riopel, my manager, as I did not wish to put anything into print which might cause anybody to say I was boasting. Riopel told me there is a difference between confidence and boasting. After all one must have confidence in his own ability if he is to accomplish anything of importance.

"I shall win back my title from George because I am a better wrestler than the American. We have met three times, and in the first two contests I displayed my superiority as a grappler. In the third contest, I scored the first fall, then had my right collar bone broken. I know you will not accuse me of offering an alibi when I say that if it had not been for that injury I would have beaten George.

"After I lost a fall, I could have refused to resume wrestling as I was badly injured. That would have left it one fall each. Of course I would have lost the decision, but I would have cast a great deal of doubt over George's victory. When I went into the ring after each of us had scored a fall, I knew I didn't have any chance of winning. I was a beaten man, and wanted George to get the glory that goes with winning a title while his opponent was in the ring rather than in the dressing room.

"I believe it was this act on my part more than anything else that caused George to give me a return bout so quickly. I find that when one displays the proper type of sportsmanship that your opponent usually gives you consideration.

DeGlane Says Patience Will Cause Defeat of George

"I believe my patience will enable me to defeat George. If I were to come rushing out of my corner and match brute strength with George I would probably lose. Ed is a powerful man. I shall not do such a thing. I shall play a waiting game. I find George is impulsive as well as strong. He cannot wait for an opening. He must try to make one. He is certain to make a mistake sooner or later, and that mistake will prove fatal to him.

"I think I am a more finished wrestler than the champion. I have been schooled by the best wrestlers in the world since I was a boy of 16 years of age. I know every possible hold. I also know how to offset anything George may attempt.

"The tryout bouts I have had since I have returned to America have convinced me that my injured shoulder is in perfect condition once more. When you come into my dressing room at the Garden after my bout with George on June 23 you will once more be able to greet me as the champion."

I believe DeGlane's letter is based on logic. He is not guilty of boasting, but has the confidence so necessary if one is to scale the heights in sports.

Boston Fans Give Full Support to Wrestling Game

Wrestling continues to draw larger crowds in this city than any of the other sports that are staged indoors. I believe the fact the promoters have offered the best possible talent is the reason the mat game has flourished here. In depression days, the public is more critical than in boom times. The promoters must offer bigger and better shows at reduced prices if they are to attract the fans. The wrestling promoters have done this.

I believe Paul Bowser pulled the master stroke of matchmaking when he signed Jumping Joe Savoldi to oppose Nick Lutze in the semifinal to the George-DeGlane match. Savoldi has beaten Jim Londos, while Jim Browning failed to throw him in two hours. Yet he consented to come to Boston on the same card with George and DeGlane against Lutze, who had the better of him in their last match up to the time the Notre Dame drop kick landed.

Father Comes to Bat With Another of Those Days

Don't forget Father's Day, which happens to come on Sunday. Everybody in the country of any importance has been given some kind of a day, and folks have once more come around to honoring the family cash register.

Father is usually the last person in the house to make any purchases for himself. Merchants tell me that the girls of the family, especially if they are over 16, are the first to be outfitted. Then mother gets her new clothes, and after her the younger children are taken care of. If there is anything left but bills, father may buy himself a new hat or a pair of shoes.

The old guy has a great deal of sentiment in him. He gets his kick out of life acting as a sort of punching bag for the rest of the family, and the various bill collectors. Take a few minutes off to day or tomorrow, buy a gift for dad and maybe he will forget his troubles for a day anyway.

Sunday, boys and girls and flossy looking wives, is dad's day. If you forget him, I hope the next time you ask him for anything, he tells you to jump into the harbor. I'm doing my shopping today

ELI YEARLINGS SHOW WAY TO CRIMSON

New London, Ct., June 16 (INS)—Harvard and Yale shared honors in the first two races this morning of their 71st annual regatta on the Thames, the Crimson squaring the count shortly before noon by sweeping down the river to a thrilling, quarter-length victory over Yale in the junior varsity contest. Previously, Yale had scored a hollow victory in the freshman race, winning by almost four lengths.

The Harvard jayvee outfit was timed in 11 49 1-5 as it flashed across the line. Yale was only three-fifths of a second behind.

In the freshman race, Yale did 12 06 2-5 for its two miles. Harvard 12 26 2-5. Yale led all the way here, passing the mile mark at 5 59, as against 6 06 for Harvard.

In the jayvee race Yale was timed in 5 45 at the mile. Harvard being six second behind at this point. It was only 1½ seconds back at the mile and a half, however. At the end it was nine feet ahead.

After the freshman race officials stated that two "crabs" were caught by the Harvard yearlings W. W. Prout, Boston, at No. 5, caught the first one, and Arthur Reane, Cambridge, at No. 6, caught the second.

Both races were held in that informal, go-as-you-please atmosphere that usually prevails during the preliminary contests, thousands remaining back in town, where they will wait until time to board the observation train for the big varsity race late this afternoon.

HARVARD FLASHES.

In so doing, they missed a heart-warming finish, which saw the Harvard Jayvees come on with a rush in the closing half-mile to win right on the line. The distance of both races was two miles.

Yale got away to a flying start in the Jayvee race and was a length out in front at the mile. Harvard began to come on at this point and at the mile and a half mark they were practically nose to nose. Yale still held tenaciously to a slender lead as they neared the outer edge of the "cub" base, but Stroke Oar Samuel S. Drury, Jr., of Concord, N. H., called on Harvard for a crying finish and it responded gallantly to row Yale down in the final brush to take the lead and win by a quarter of a length.

The victory of the Harvard jayvees raised the Crimson hopes for a third triumph over the Elis in the classic four-mile dual to be rowed down stream to the railroad bridge at 7 45 tonight.

FRESH IN MISHAP

In the freshman race a mishap in the Harvard shell less than 100 yards after the eights had passed the mile mark spoiled what chances the Crimson cubs had of a victory. From the train it appeared as though Bill Prout, No. 5, caught a crab, while some expressed the belief that he had gotten his slide up in under him. Whatever it was, the Harvard crew appeared demoralized for a few moments, but recovered and finished the race with three full lengths of open water between it and the winning Yale eight.

The Yale freshman eight was stroked by Horace Havemeyer, Jr., of New York city. After the race both freshmen crews rowed back to the Harvard quarters at Red Top, where the defeated crew surrendered their shirts to the victorious Yale freshman eight.

Harvard Varsity Is Favored Over Yale

New London, Ct., June 16—Harvard varsity crew's prayer for "a big wind and a rough river" were amply answered judging from weather conditions along the Thames River race course at noon today.

Lowering clouds scudded across the skies, driven by a brisk northeast wind which put white caps on the normally placid Thomas

KIM FLASHES INTO THE STRETCH IN $1000 DASH

Clyde Park race fans were thrilled as Mrs. Frank R. Gould's Kim, with Mr. C. R. White up, sped into the stretch and won in the fifth race, the Chestnut Hill Horse Show chase for a $1000 award. F. A. Upsher Smith's Melita, with Mr. R. B. Young up, was second. Mrs. John Hay Whitney's San Romolo took the third place, with Mr. Rigan McKinney up.

MET AMATEUR FIELD CUT TO FOUR

Flushing, N. Y., June 16 (AP)—Sensational golf marked the quarter-final round of the Metropolitan amateur championship today at the Fresh Meadows Country Club. The survivors are Walter Rothenberg of Wings Point, Mark J. Stuart of Forest Hills, Eddie Held of Forgate, and James Hicks, brother of Miss Helen Hicks, the former national champion.

Held and Hicks won their matches by 5 and 4, the former beating Tommy Goodwin of Montclair, New York State amateur champion, and the latter taking the measure of A. W. Laddish in a three-up in the Long Island amateur championship records.

Stuart defeated W. Neal Fulkerson of the Cherry Valley Club, by 1 and 2, while Rothenberg, the last of the four medalists to survive, won from Robert Lester of Essex County, by 1 up.

Six Races on in Finale at Clyde Park

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

Society folk and the other thousands of persons interested in horse racing will journey to The Country Club, Clyde at., Brookline, for the Bunker Hill Day race of

This spectacular meeting of the Eastern Horse Show Club, the second day of the 43d race meeting, will find all with their eyes set on Mr. Rigan McKinney. This great amateur rider is filling the shoes of Pete Bostwick, who is out of the saddle for the time being due to injuries.

Mr McKinney had a gala day on the opening matinee, booting home a trio of winners, while a fourth mount thundered down the stretch to take third money.

Just McKinney's desire to keep his eyes on another pair of gentlemen cost him fourth place in the third race. However, he had no trouble winning the first and second on the flat and the fourth the Chamblet Memorial Steeplechase over a distance of about two miles.

Tomorrow being Bunker Hill Day and the last day of the week, a half holiday, many of the boys and girls will be out rousing about the green sod, the paddock and various other spots. They will not only watch to see what mounts Mr. McKinney will astride, but they will be ready to lay a few green paper sheets on the bob-tails.

SHIRES SENT TO ROCHESTER

Columbus, O., June 16 (AP)—President George M. Trautman, of the Columbus Red Birds, today announced he had traded Charles Arthur "The Great" Shires, first baseman and three other players to the Rochester Club of the International League.

With Shires Trautman said, will go Second Baseman Charley Wilson and Pitchers Jim Lindsey and Fred "Sheriff" Blake.

In exchange Columbus gets Mickey Heath, first baseman, formerly with the Cincinnati Reds; Short-top Benny Borgman, known also as a professional basketball player and Pitchers Jim Winford and Ed Heusser who have been with the local club before.

Shires, Wilson and Lindsey, with Gordon Slade, shortstop, were barred from competition under Columbus colors by American Association magnates because of an alleged violation of the league's salary agreement.

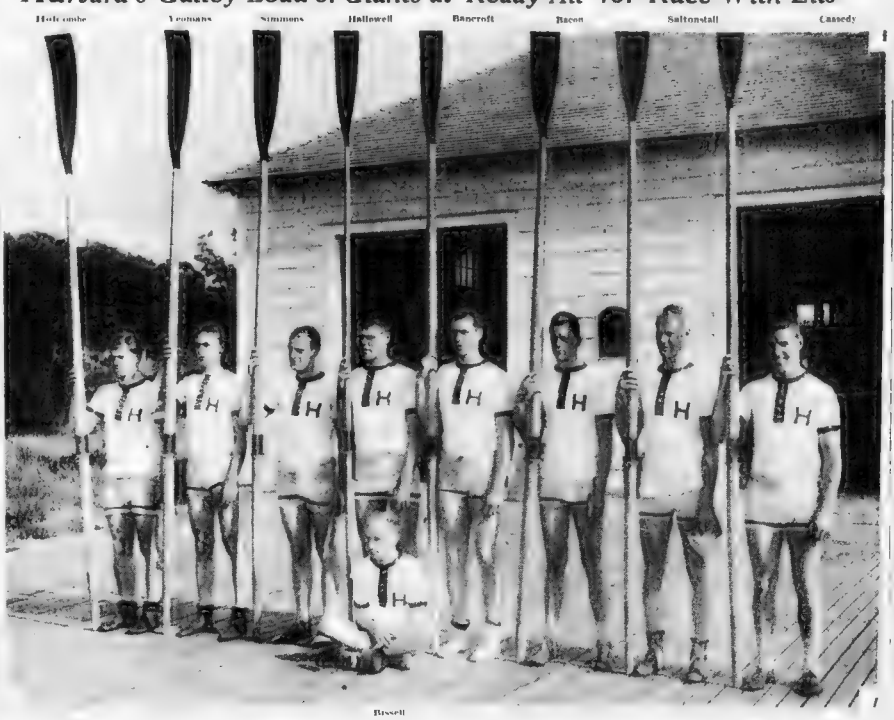
Harvard's Galley Load of Giants at 'Ready All' for Race With Elis



Here are the eight young gentlemen from Harvard who go to the starting line in the crew classic with Yale on the Thames today. This boatload never trailed in the backwash of a Yale eight. As freshmen, and twice as varsity rowers, Harvard's crew has led the way in the gruelling four-mile run at New London. Today they start in their last race, with the expectation of making it a clean sweep over the Elis. Weather is to their liking. And the goal, if they win, is to become the greatest crew in Harvard history. Ready all, Harvard? Then row!

Diamond Dust

The scandal mongers will probably keep quiet for a time now that the Red Sox have won five games in a row and climbed out of the cellar. When the Fenway flock was in its slump, the self-elected critics of the club had Eddie Collins ready to drop the knife right and left on the head of his charges.

The general manager said this along there wasn't a germ of truth in any of these reports and that didn't hold anybody to blame for the failure of the club to get started. The recent surge of the Sox proves it. A club without harmony doesn't whip the Yanks five straight.

Giants Flag Threat

The Giants-Brooklyn feud makes the New Yorkers a serious pennant threat. The league-leaders haven't weakened themselves any by letting Sam Leslie go and they get one of the finest left-handed hurlers in the game in Watson Clarke and a terrific hitter in "Lefty" O'Doul even though the defending National League batting king is hitting far under .300 at present.

It appears, too, as though the Braves virtually assured themselves of a first-division berth by getting Pinky Whitney and Hal Lee from the Phils. Both these newcomers figure to hit better than .300 and a pair of sluggers is all that is needed to make the Tribe's excellent pitching and fielding next to unbeatable.

Ascot, Eng., June 16 (AP)—King George's Limelight, at odds of 7 to 1 today won the Hardwicke Stakes at a mile and a half for one of His Majesty's few racing victories of the year.

Limelight won by a neck from D. S. Kennedy Nitsichin, which ran third yesterday in the two-and-a-half-mile gold cup and Sir C. Chubb's Donna Sol was third only a head back in the blanket finish. Eight ran.

The purse was £900.

Majors Seeking Talent on Twilight Diamonds

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

The big leaguers have started to raid for next season. The [illegible] major league clubs are digging into sandlots and semi-pro ranks for baseball nuggets. James Grant of Alston who has been playing for Marion, already has been assigned to the Braves.

Grant [illegible] reported to the Braves next week and [illegible] will be sent to the Braves' farm team at Hartford of the N. Y. P. and A. League or to New Bedford of the New England League for seasoning. Dennis started for Princeton College where he was coached by a Southerner named Holden.

There are a better field for baseball prospects than the rural sandlots. Many of the local amateur and semi-pro stars will be [illegible] into the majors via the [illegible] path before the summer is over. The Boston Twilight League and the Boston Twilight League are especially fertile fields for major league prospecting. Some big league scouts are to be found at many of the twilight games these days.

Batting Race Close

There was never a better fight for batting leadership than is going on in the Boston Twilight League. McIntire and Gumbert of Waltham and the two Concannon brothers and Rea of the Lowell C. M. A. C.'s are in a "dog fight" for the slugging crown.

The fight for the pennant in both the City League and the Twilight League are not as the fight for batting. Batting leadership. The big lead the St. Angelines had in the City League has evaporated and Brockton, Argenteau and Pierantozzi are racing neck and neck in the East Division with Roslindale and the Hemlocks showing plenty strength in the West Div. on.

ATHLETICS FEAR WINNING SURGE OF RED SOX

FENWAY CLAN SLAMS YANKS; QUITS CELLAR

By JOE CASHMAN

A tall, slim, kindly-eyed old gentleman sits in the lobby of a Copley Sq. hotel reading a newspaper. Suddenly, as though his eyes happen on an item that alarms him, he tosses the sheet aside and begins talking in a low but agitated voice to several husky young men lounging on either side of him.

He is Connie Mack and his listeners are certain of the Philadelphia Athletics. They're in town resting up for a holiday doubleheader at the Fens tomorrow.

"So the Red Sox have won four games in a row from the Yankees and are out of the cellar," the tall tactician begins. "I don't like that a bit. It's bad news, very bad."

"Tut, tut, boss," broke in a smiling youth who answers to the name of Jimmy Foxx, "that's nothing to worry about. They're out of the basement by one point. I'll hit two or three home runs tomorrow and knock them right back again."

"Tut, tut, yourself, young man," admonishes Connie. "Know what you're talking about before you address your elders. The Yanks hit six home runs here. So what? So the Sox made 63 hits for a total of 98 bases, including eight circuit drives. You hit two or three home runs and we'll never get those McManusmen out.

RED SOX ROLLING

"I repeat, I don't like the news I read about the Sox. When a club starts clicking like they did against the Yanks it usually takes weeks to slow it down.

"Remember the '14 Braves." On July 4 they were in the cellar. By Labor Day they were first and won the pennant in a walk because nobody worried about them until it was too late. Then they licked my A's four straight in the World's Series.

"That's the way with these Boston clubs. No half measures for them. They're very good or very bad. And you, Jimmy, and the rest of you had better start doing a little worrying with me, if you have any designs of staying in the money."

And several very much subdued young men promised they will, as old Connie walks away.

Our rampant Red Rollers didn't go near Fenway Park today, having been given the day to themselves to celebrate their Yankee conquests.

The final battle with the McCarthymen was as thrilling and nerve-racking as this frail scribe can never before was a series like it at the Fens and the chances are there never will be again.

HOSE BATTER YANKS

The Sox started off by piling up a three run lead at the expense of Johnny Allen. The Yanks broke into the run column when Tony Lazzeri hoisted a Henry Johnson pitch over the wall in the fifth. In the seventh, Lou Gehrig doubled and Ben Chapman tied the score with another homer.

That was the spark that set off our attack, Marty McManus, first to bat in the last of the lucky frame, broke the tie at once with a four-bagger. Cooke singled, Alex was hit by a pitched ball and Johnny Gooch, catching for Ferrell, who skinned his little finger on a foul tip in the fifth after getting two hits and knocking in two runs, doubled. Then Roy Johnson hit his seventh circuit drive of the season.

The Yanks knocked Johnson out when they scored two more runs in the eighth but Weiland was rushed in and stopped them dead.

So the Sox climbed to seventh. And, as old Connie points out, there's no telling when they'll stop their ascent.

TAP'S TIPS

'Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

At its best, golf is an uncertain game, but seldom has an intercity team come so far from measuring up to expectations as did the Boston outfit against New York in the Griscom Cup match at Brae Burn.

Before the start of the New York match, Boston was conceded a victory by a margin of four or five points, But through the sacrificing of two players, Mary Parkinson and Mrs. H. F. Prunaret, Jr., both of whom could have won against any other players than Charlotte Glutting and Maureen Orcutt and the collapse of some other stars, the local team went down.

One of the causes of the failure of the Boston team was that most of its players paid far too much attention to their medal scores, which do not mean anything in match play. If some of these players come up with a seven or an eight, they are through for the day.

Mrs. Prunaret Stars

Although she went down to defeat, Mrs. Henri F. Prunaret, Jr., Myopia Hill, was the outstanding Boston player. She was paired against Maureen Orcutt, one of the top-notch women golfers, but never flinched. The fact that she was not conceded even an outside chance of victory did not cause Mrs. Prunaret to tighten up. Rather it instilled in her more fight and Miss Orcutt was obliged to set up a new course record of 75 to beat the Charles River player, 3 to 2.

Having won the Frost Cup, emblematic of store team championship last week at Weston, and thereby prevented its retirement by Wm. Filene's Sons Co., the Gilchrist Co is predicting a victory over the Shepard Stores this afternoon. It will be a battle well worth following, for Shepard is out to flatten any team that attempts to block its dash for the Mitos Cup.

Just as Dorothy Hunter was motioning, in answer to a query, that she was one up on Miss Jane D'noke, her opponent exploded out of a trap at the 13th and into the cup to square the match. Dot received the surprise of her life when she turned around and saw Miss Brooks' ball dropping into the cup.

Boston Beats Philly for Griscom Trophy

By BILL GRIMES

For the first time in three years, Boston's intercity team won the Griscom Cup today by defeating Philadelphia 10—5 at the Brae Burn Country Club.

Due to the fact that each of the contesting teams won one and lost one match, the teams were all even. The award to Boston was made on the point system, having a total of 17 points against 15 for Philadelphia and 13 for New York.

Philadelphia opened with a 10-5 win over New York in the first match, but the metropolitan team came back yesterday to score an 8-7 victory over Boston.

Then Boston turned the tables by beating Philadelphia 10-5 today. This was Boston's 13th win in Grimson Cup competition.

During the present Grimon cup series, Miss Dorothy Richards of Weston, Mrs. E. H. Baker, Jr., of Oakley, and Deborah Verry of Kitansett, and Miss Jane Broadwell of Long Meadow were Boston's only double winners.

2 MATCHES FOR MRS. BAKER

After beating Mrs. Stevens of New York yesterday, Miss Richards defeated Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, former British and U. S. champion, 3-1.

Mrs. Baker pinned a 1-2 defeat on Mrs. H. March, and defeated Miss Jane McCullough, 4-3, today.

Mrs. W. A. Johnson was Miss Deborah Verry's second victim. The Worcester girl having won from Miss Silleck yesterday.

Miss Jane Broadwell, who defeated Mrs. Limburg in the first Boston match, won from Miss Natalie Peace, 5-4, today.

BIG SHAKEUP

As predicted, there was a general shakeup in the Boston lineup, and three replacements. Miss Martha Brewer was substituted for Mrs. C. F. Eaton, Jr., and she defeated Mrs. H. Stebbins. Mrs. E. M. Belcher replaced Mrs. Willie Howard and came from behind to beat Mrs. R. H. Barlow, 3-2.

Miss Joyce Bigelow, who played in place of Mrs. J. B. Patterson, won a 3-2 verdict from Miss Barbara Wieber.

Whitney String at Rockingham

Salem, N. H., June 15—With the arrival of six carloads, carrying 75 horses, the total of thoroughbreds now quartered at Rockingham is 450.

Heading the list of new arrivals were the horses of C. V. Whitney of New York and Newport. The Whitney stable is trained by J. A. Healey, one of the best known trainers in the racing world.

The 14 Whitney horses now quartered at Rockingham are: Redress, Rapscallion, Moon Shy, Lawless Jabot, Incandescent, Good Guess, Net Work, Daisy Cutter, Disdainful, Carpeted Clothe, Baby John, and Banderlog.

Doherty Elected Captain at Medford

Patrick Doherty, who played right field for Medford High this year was today elected captain of the nine for next season. A tie existed between Larry Green and Doherty when last the lettermen met but today's election was made unanimous. At the same meeting it was announced that football candidates would meet at the school gym Monday at 2:30 to meet the new football coaches and make plans for the coming fall campaign.

BRAVES, PHILS RAINED OUT

Special to Boston American

Philadelphia, June 16—Boston's Braves came here today to take Pinky Whitney and Hall Lee from the Phillies, hand over Fritz Knothe and Wes Schulmerich to Burt Shotton, and then were forced to postpone a two-game series with the local cellar occupants because of rain.

Though the Warriors were in seventh place arriving here, Manager Bill McKechnie was all smiles.

"Whitney and Lee will give us the punch we need to climb to the first division," said Bill. "We're only four games back of fourth place now, and we'll make up that distance in very short order."

Philly fans were anything but pleased over the deal, but they have nobody but themselves to blame. They refuse to patronize the Phils, and the management was forced to make the trade to meet expenses.

Ed Brandt, southpaw ace, is carded to hurl for the Braves this p. m. He was carded to pitch against the Giants in New York, yesterday, but McKechnie gambled with Zachary and Fallenstin and whipped the league-leaders, 7 to 4, after losing the first two games of the engagement.

Miss Bridges Seeks Swimming Marks

Alice Bridges of the Whitin C. A., New England's leading free style natad of the indoor season, is going to make new American long course records in a special feature of the Boston Swimming Association's opening meet of the season tomorrow night at the Nautical Pool in Revere.

YALE GOLFERS TAKE TROPHY

New Haven, Ct., June 15 (AP)—Yale took the team trophy from Harvard, Holy Cross Williams and Dartmouth in the Paul Hewland tournament, held annually on the Yale course in memory of the captain of the Yale 1927 golf team, who died three years ago.

William Donnelly, Holy Cross player, of Boston, was the individual winner, defeating Frank Noyes of Yale and Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., 3 up in a four-hole playoff.

*—Drew one bye.

By BILL GRIMES

After a break in its schedule, caused by the annual Retail Trade Board tournament last week, the Retail Stores Golf League resumes play this afternoon at the Charles River Country Club.

Although four rounds have been played, there is a difference of only three points between first and third teams. The Shepard Stores have annexed 36½ points and have a two and onehalf point lead over Filene's, with Hovey's and Slattery's deadlocked with 33½ points.

SLATTERY'S DRAWS BYE

The E. T. Slattery Co. drew a bye for this afternoon and so temporarily loses ground.

Due to the return of Frank Vorenberg, the Shepard Stores' opponent this afternoon, the Gilchrist Co., is represented by the strongest team it has fielded during any of the four ball matches. Vorenberg will team up with H. W. Schaschke and M. G. Balmayne will tackle Ben Black and H. M. Flint.

While the Shepard Stores fight to retain the lead, the Wm. Filene's Sons Co. tackles Jordan Marsh. Jordan's Bob Mitton teams with Warren Carey against Jack McCarthy and Jack Egan. Lindsey Hutton and R. W. Dodge take on George Baxe and Paul Hennessey.

HOVEY'S "DARK HORSE"

The C. F. Hovey Co., dark horse of the field, plays Sears Roebuck.

If Sears Roebuck gets out its top strength of Chairman R. Williams, Bill Nugent, Jr., Henry Bradford and Jerry Geran, the Hovey team of Dan Walsh, Frank Coyne, Joe Howe and John Roche has an assignment on its hands.

The Conrad & Co. team will make its first appearance in three weeks today and is stacked against the R. H. White Co.

A CHAMPION ON PARADE

Johnny Goodman, new U. S. open golf king, lights up. The golf crown safely on his head, he needs relaxation. For the title strain was terrific.

From tee to cup is an easy assignment for Goodman. Here he splits the pin with a tee shot, in the title drive. He shot a 66 in the second round. And continued at a hot pace to win the title.

Refreshed, the links ruler reflects on his success in the open. The mirror reflects his pleasure. It was a long grind, up the title trail. But thoroughbred Johnny, a boy who fought to the heights, made good. The U. S. G. A. was a long time realizing Goodman's worth. Now it must give him a place with the greatest golfers. SHARKEY AND GARDEN BREAK OVER TICKETS

By DAVIS J. WALSH

New York, June 16 (INS)—A definite break between Jack Sharkey and Madison Sq. Garden was declared today by the heavyweight champion and his manager, Johnny Buckley, leading up to what will be a $700,000 meeting with Max Baer next year for the heavyweight championship.

Either John Dempsey, the perennially man, or James J. Johnston, the master of rhetoric, will get his match, it was said.

"Dempsey will be all right with us, if Johnston isn't available," Buckley declared, conveniently forgetting that Dempsey already controls 50 per cent of the match even before it is made. "If Johnston is still tied up with Madison Square Garden, that will be his misfortune.

"We're through there with the Carnera fight late this month. Regardless who takes charge of the Garden, we'd still be through."

TICKET SQUABBLE

From another source it was learned that Sharkey is seeking his "out" through the convenient avenue that provided Schmeling with an excuse to take his trade elsewhere—the allotment of tickets.

But others, less credulous, are liable to be impressed with the coincidence involved in Buckley's announcement today and Dempsey's visit to the Sharkey camp on Wednesday.

Nevertheless, it is known that the tickets Sharkey will be permitted to buy for his own prize fight have been delivered to him; that less than 25 of these are in the first five rows and none at all in the first row.

He has ordered 130 tickets sold together and the rest of them range from the 18th to the 23rd row. However, if you are known to the right people, and your composure is not greatly shaken by Tiffany prices, there is always the bare possibility that you can make more satisfactory arrangements elsewhere.

BOYCOTT GARDEN

However, the ticket thing is believed to be largely a pretext. According to stories that have been in circulation before and since the Baer-Schmeling fight, there is something of an elaborate plot in the making to boycott the Garden out of further control of the heavyweight situation.

Even Carnera is said to be a tacit party to this understanding although he is still on paper for another fight there in case he wins from Sharkey.

But this contrast, according to a boxing commission precedent, has no standing unless accompanied by another name, the commission having brightly decided that it takes two men to make on prize fight. So the only result of a Carnera victory on June 29 would be this. A Baer-Carnera fight in September, instead of a Baer-Sharkey fight next year.

WASHBURN TO GRAPPLE ON CROWN CARD

By JACK CONWAY

Another startling wrestling announcement by Paul Bowser, who is promoting the world's heavyweight championship wrestling bout between Ed Don George and Henri DeGlane at the Boston Garden a week from tonight in cooperation with the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American!

Here's the big news. Bowser has signed Gentleman Jack Washburn, hero of hundreds of stormy mat wars, to battle Earl McCready of Oklahoma in one of the supporting bouts to the championship jam. It was only a year ago that the colorful Washburn clashed with DeGlane in a title contest that attracted 25,000 persons to Braves Field.

"I want to be on the Christmas Fund card," pleaded Washburn. "Let Bowser match me with any heavyweight in the world. I don't care what money Paul pays me as long as I'm on the card.

BRILLIANT MAT PROGRAM

The signing of Washburn and McCready adds another dash of fire to what promises to be the greatest mat show ever staged in this city. The card arranged to date follows:

Ed Don George, world's champion, vs. Henri DeGlane, France, best two falls out of three for the title.

Jumping Joe Savoldi, Notre Dame, vs. Nick Lutze, California.

Joe Malcewicz, uncrowned champion, vs. "Man Mountain" Dean.

"Gentleman" Jack Washburn, vs. Earl McCready.

Tommy Parle, who is in charge of the sale of tickets at Paul Bowser's office at No. 115 Chauncy st., reports a tremendous rush for reservations.

SHOW IS BOOMING

"The show had plenty of life as soon as it was announced George would defend his title against DeGlane," said Tommy.

"With Macewicz in there with Dean and Washburn battling McCready the Garden will hardly be large enough to accommodate all those persons who wish to attend the show. I believe Bowser and the Christmas Fund committee exercised excellent judgment in offering this show at popular prices of $1, 2 and $3 plus the Federal tax. The fans have not as much money as they had a few years ago, and popular prices assures a sellout. Also a bargain for the public."

DAILY TRUE STORY -:- Honor Among Thieves

PATROLMAN FRED VAIL came home one afternoon and said to his young wife, "Well, kiss your husband goodbye. I won't be seeing you for a couple of weeks."

"Where are you going?" asked Helen Vail.

"I'm going to jail, said Fred. "And don't you tell anybody I'm there, either. Just say I've gone out of town on a trip. When I come back I may be a sergeant."

He was right. He had but one more. "Wait till I come back," he said. "I'll tell you everything."

Four men lolled in the exercise yard of the Charlestown jail. One was reading a crumpled, soiled newspaper several days old.

"Here's something about my birds," he said to the three others. "What is it?" one of them asked.

"It's about that robbery you didn't pull off," answered the paper reader. "It says I've got old man Shalleck has come back and that he says a string of pearls is missing from a secret drawer in his wife's dresser. Of course, none of you saw them."

THE ROBBERY

"There weren't any pearls," said the youngest of the three. "I know there wasn't, because—"

"Button your lip," interrupted another of the three, an older man. "You don't know anything about it. Neither do we. What do you want to go shooting off your mouth for?"

"I guess that's right," said the younger man. He turned to the paper reader. "You can't believe everything you read in the papers," he said.

"Well, I'm not arguing about it," was the reply. "I'm just telling you what it says."

The three moved away and for the next several days there was no more mention of the robbery of the Shalleck home, which had taken place two weeks previously. The three to whom the paper reader had spoken were being held in jail as suspects in the robbery.

The subject came up again, however. Once more the paper reader was reading a newspaper when the youngest of the suspects approached him. His two companions were not in sight.

"Anything more in these about the Shalleck job?" he asked.

"Yeah," was the reply. "It says here that old man Shalleck has offered $1000 reward for the birds that did that job. They tore his house to pieces, and, naturally, he's pretty sore about it. He's been beefing to the police that a man can't go away for a few days without his house being robbed. It says here that the cops won't prosecute the guy who turns state's evidence."

"Does it say anything more about those pearls?" asked the suspect.

"Only that old man Shalleck says he paid five thousand for them. I guess the birds who grabbed them were able to get about a thousand from a fence. The rest of the stuff they got wasn't worth much. But those pearls were a good haul."

The young suspect mumbled something and moved away. Then he came back again. He seemed hesitating about something. Then he finally spoke.

"Listen," he said, "suppose a guy wanted to see the warden in private like? Just how would he go about it?"

OFFICER VAIL EXPLAINS

"Well," answered the paper reader, "he could tell me, for instance, and I could tell the warden. Then the warden could send for him."

"Suppose you tell the warden to send for me," the suspect said.

"You see," Patrolman Vail—soon to be Sergeant Vail—said to his wife the next day, "I got the idea when I heard that none of these birds could read. We were pretty sure that they were the ones who had done it, but we couldn't prove it. And old man Shalleck has a drag with the commissioner and we were being ridden hard.

"Lots of these tough crooks can't read. They never went to school. So I got the captain to arrange to have me sent to jail as a suspect in another robbery. I didn't go to get them to talk. They would have spotted me right away if I had. That's an old dodge—planting somebody in a prison.

"But all I did was pretend to read about those pearls. I figured that one of them might think the others were double-crossing him—that they really had stolen the pearls and were holding out on him. When a crook thinks he has been double-crossed he'll turn in his own mother. And the youngest one

With this ringing phrase . . . Jordan Marsh Company announced the presentation of its 1933 Summertime Specials.

We Congratulate Jordan Marsh Company for the contribution of this timely phrase to the spirit of the times.

We congratulate them also for their practical demonstration of confidence, that the turn has come, and for their courage in going into the market to buy over one-half million dollars' worth of merchandise, for this present series of Summertime Specials.

And lastly . . . and with due modesty . . . we congratulate them on their decision to run four full pages of these Summertime Specials in the Boston Evening American on Thursday.

From every section of the country . . . from every line of business comes the stirring of a new confidence . . . a definite belief that the turn has come. We believe . . . with Jordan Marsh Company that . . . .

Crazy Quilt Taxes

Congress Fails to Reach Heart of Problem

With the racketeering character of the income tax exposed, Congress belatedly turned its attention to closing up some of the avenues by which the rich escape.

It undertook to tighten the law to prevent tax evasion by investment bankers and partnerships dealing in securities.

The Conference Committee, retaining most of the features of the Senate version of the tax section of the Industry Control Bill, also provided for conditional publicity as to income tax returns.

These partial efforts to interfere with tax dodging by the wealthy and the consequent shouldering of the full burden on salaried men and others of moderate means represent an impulse to put common honesty back into the law.

But both houses of Congress have failed to go to the heart of the problem of tax revision.

Congress is still animated by the demagogic philosophy that the purpose of taxation is to soak somebody.

In spite of the prolonged period of large scale unemployment, our simple-minded lawmakers have not yet learned that when, by faulty taxation, they interfere with the channels of trade the chief victims are the jobless.

The dole of tax exemption to millions of men without income is a worthless privilege.

Yet Congress, blinded by prejudice, continued to reject the general manufacturers' sales tax and substituted a hodge-podge make-shift program for a clear-cut, scientific fiscal system.

It turned thumbs down on the patriotic demand of both the American Federation of Labor and the Chamber of Commerce of the United States for a general manufacturers' sales tax to pay the debt service on the public works program.

It ignored the hint from President Roosevelt, who had formerly opposed the sales tax, that he would not veto such a measure if Congress passed it.

Once more the national legislature has muffed an opportunity to contribute to economic stability and business revival through substituting a sane and sound taxation system for the prevailing crazy-quilt tax measures.

In time legislators will be elected who will recognize the rising tide of public sentiment for a logical, consistent and equitable system of taxation.

In such a new order of taxation the general manufacturers' sales tax, which has succeeded so admirably in Canada where it is known as the painless tax, will take a pivotal place.

Prosperity Sign Posts

New Hope for Textile Industry

Four national rubber companies, all with branches in New England, have increased wages ten per cent.

General Hugh Johnson tells us 4,000,000 men, now idle, will be at work ere October 1, thanks to the President's public works program.

Secretary of Labor Perkins sends word that employment in factories increased nearly five per cent last month and wages eleven and one-half per cent.

All these assurances are in line with the extraordinary progress being made toward complete economic recovery.

And none of them is more assuring and more optimistic than the announcement made by President Ernest N. Hood of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers of the improvements made and to be made in the textile field.

The textiles are a fundamental industry, upon which depend the employment and contentment of many thousands of our men and women.

Mr. Hood declares that the Industrial Recovery Act now gives to New England the best opportunity in more than a dozen years to compete with the other sections of the country on an even keel.

The hours of work will be equalized.

The entire textile industry will operate on a 40-hour basis, with two shifts when necessary.

The workers will receive a higher rate of pay; a rate to be paid in 40 hours for the old 48-hour basis.

There will be a minimum wage, higher in the North than in the South, and the disposition of the Administration and of the employers will be to pay much in excess of that minimum.

Demands for goods will require the mills to operate on the two-shift basis, thus bringing in many thousands of workers now out of work.

Patience will be required to adjust these new conditions.

Certainly we have had the courage to tackle them.

Co-operation will be necessary all along the line.

These are all fine signposts on the highway to prosperity again.

We must express the fervent hope that the textile industry of New England will regain its normal strength and past greatness.

If ever there was a group of men and women deserving of social justice and advancement it is the patient, hard-working people of the textile mills.

A Word to Autoists

Railroads Promote Safety

The New Haven Railroad has been awarded the Harriman gold medal "for the utmost progress in safety and accident prevention."

This competition was open to all first-class railroads of the country, and the New Haven, like Abou Ben Adhem, led all the rest.

What it means is that the New Haven achieved the greatest strides in the efforts further to safeguard the lives and safety of both passengers and employes.

These awards for splendid public service are being won by New England with a regularity that would be monotonous if it were not for the calibre of service performed.

The Boston Elevated has won the Brady medal for safety so often that it is now everywhere regarded as being the safest street railway in the United States.

If the automobile drivers would now get this idea of safety and caution into their heads, all would be happy. The highways would no longer be regarded as a slaughterhouse of the innocents.

New York Day by Day

Varied Impressions

NEW YORK, June 16 — Thoughts while strolling: Everybody in the American Mercury tries to write like Mencken. William Rhinelander Stewart and Jay O'Brien look alike. So do Dot Aylesworth and Ruth Chatterton. And Ted Saucier and Emil Coleman. Count Obelensky's Floyd Gibbons eyepatch — only black.

O. O. McIntyre

One word description of Pepy de Albrew — silky. Elv Culbertson has the best fitting clothes hereabouts. But no one has ever topped Caruso in carrying a cane. And that reminds me Tom Geraghty goes on a cane, spat and derby spree when he blows in from Hollywood. And ashcans them when he parts, the coward!!

Walter Damrosch's snowwhite tuft of eyebrows. Howard Chandler Christy and his blackened briar. Ben Ames Willam, the big stiff, walks like a bear. And a bear of a novelest, too. Louis Wiley, a Hornell, N. Y., boy, who made good in the city. Who was it wondered if he missed the last supper?

One of my favorite people—George Gershwin. Whatever became of Robert Cortes Holliday? There's a grand essayist. Peggy Fears now has two taffy streaks in her hair. . The great Marconi and Steinmetz always seem to me fantasies of the laboratory—never quite human.

* * *

Fannie Hurst has a Pom that travels with her on lecture tours. It is a Pom o' my thumb specimen, and in passing through train gates she throws it over her arm and conceals it with a fur piece. Recently in Columbus, O., she forgot to cover the pet. The gateman thumberked toward the baggage room to have the animal checked in the baggage car. "No dogs in Pullman," he growled. Miss Hurst, flustered and in sudden blurt, said: "It isn't a dog. It's mammal." He glanced again and grudgingly snapped: "Go on in but it looks like a dog to me."

* * *

Adolph Ochs's only offspring, Mrs. Arthur Hays Sulzberger, whose life is devoted largely to philanthropy, has had two experiences that would lighten Bob Ripley's chore for a day. She was once chased and attacked by an angry hen in Iceland and hooked by a cow in the Museum of Natural History. The latter adventure was the result of attending a dairy exhibit. In passing a haltered bovine she stopped to stroke its head. The next thing she knew she had been tossed in a twirling flurry a distance of 10 feet, but was happily unhurt. Relating the incident to her father that evening, his newspaper instinct predominated. He immediately thought of a grand headline: "Ochs Gored by Cow!"

* * *

Mr. Ochs has a favorite story concerning his newspaper, The Times. An esteemed servant long in his household passed on and several of her aged friends in service sat up with the body. When the publisher arrived home late he went to the servants' hall and asked the watchers if they were comfortable. Could he get them anything before retiring? A spokesman thanked him and said it was a pleasure to meet him. They had all been discussing what a wonderful paper he conducted. "No big headlines or inky cartoons," she said, "and the most satisfactory paper for shelves."

* * *

And there's Leon Gordon's yarn of the interior decorator who fluttered into a police station with news his fellow decorator was lifeless in the car at the curb. It proved true and he was asked how it happened. He explained they had been arguing about a room they were doing. He was for an effect in Copenhagen China blue and his friend held out for an orchid tint. "We had been arguing," he falsetooed. "I said blue, he said orchid. I patted my hands and again said blue, he continued to repeat orchid. Blue, I yelled. Putting his hand on his hip he screamed 'Pul-leeze!' and in throwing back his head broke his neck!"

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Survival of Luckiest

QUIET LITTLE Ishbel MacDonald said four big words when she visited us recently, with her famous dad.

Someone asked her what she thought of the depression — if she didn't agree that it would "bring out the grit" in people and result in the "survival of the fittest."

"OR OF THE LUCKIEST," she retorted grimly.

And that was no "sob sister" answer. Ishbel MacDonald and her father know what depressions really are. Not mere three-year spasms of industrial discouragement, but depressions that spread from generation to generation—hard times that never end. For Prime Minister MacDonald was once a coal miner. And if a coal miner doesn't know what Bad Breaks are, nobody does.

Elsie Robinson

"Survival of the fittest"—that term riled Ishbel MacDonald. She knew what it actually means in our present scheme of things.

NOT survival of the brainiest.

Nor survival of the noblest.

Nor survival of the worthiest.

BUT—

Survival of the best fed;

Of the richest born;

Of the ones with the "strongest pull,"

And the most calloused conscience,

And toughest hide.

Survival, not of the mentally or spiritually "fittest,"

But of the slickest.

The fattest.

The most selfish,

THE LUCKIEST!

Mind you, I'm not saying that birth's everything. Or the breaks, either. Or that any human has a right to sit down and whine because he wasn't born with the proverbial golden spoon in his mouth.

Nor do I believe that even a life-time of poverty, sickness and misery can break a man—IF HE REFUSES TO BE BROKEN.

But just looking at things as they are, as the average human who is neither a saint nor a mutter-mind has to look at them, OUR PRESENT SCHEME OF LIFE IS LOUSY.

And by lousy I mean lousy. Literally. It's exactly the sort of a scheme a louse would make if he were endowed, for instance, with the brain of a Morgan or a Mitchell. It has exactly the vision and technique of all Bigger and Better Bugs. Hang on! Bore in! Grab a mouthful while the mouthful's good. And let the littler, weaker fellow go hang!

So I'm saying—we sombrero's off to Ishbel MacDonald. She called the turn.

Ours isn't a Christian society.

Or a civilized society.

It's a lousy society—

A society for the Liveliest and Luckiest Insects!

Why kid ourselves that it isn't?

Just Folks

Inflation and the Wife

I've given up! All hope is vain
And 'tis the sorrow of my life,
I have no words which can explain
Inflation to my lovely wife.

No speech have I at my command
To end these strange domestic scenes,
And get my wife to understand
Precisely what inflation means.

I've tried a dozen times or more
To tell her what it's all about,
And still she questions as before
And still she shakes her head in doubt.

"The times are out of joint! Oh, spite,"
As Shakespeare said. This intervenes,
Now I must struggle every night,
Explaining what inflation means.

I've given up! Too great the task
And yet tonight I know again,
At supper time she'll smile and ask
If I can make inflation plain.

Manila More Important Than London to U. S.

By James T. Williams, Jr.

Manila will be the scene this summer of a Philippine "conference" far more important to the future of the United States than is the settlement of any question or all of the questions on the agenda of the world economic conference just opened by King George at London.

At the Philippine conference the question to be decided is whether the Philippine Legislature shall accept or reject the unfair terms upon which the last Congress offered political independence to the Philippine people 10 years hence at the price of inevitable economic destruction in the meantime.

The conference in Manila will take place between the two Houses of the insular legislature which begins its annual session in Manila on July 17.

Leading the opposition to the acceptance of this legislation are Gen. Emilio Aguinaldo and Senator Manuel Quezon. The one has just been re-elected for the 15th successive year president of the Philippine Veterans' Association, the other is President of the Philippine Senate. These two leaders have laid aside their political differences to unite their efforts in behalf of a square deal for their people.

* * *

They are opposing this legislative proposal upon the ground that it "is not an independence bill at all" but only "a tariff bill" directed against Philippine products. "The element of independence," they say, "is merely a sugar coating in order to impose unfair conditions upon the Philippines."

Advocating acceptance of the measure are the members of the Philippine Independence Mission who were in Washington during the session of the 72nd Congress at which this measure became a law. They are led by Senator Sergo Osmena and Speaker Roxas of the Lower House of the Philippine Legislature. They urge acceptance upon the ground that the opportunity to frame a constitution a year hence can be utilized to compel changes in the unfair terms upon which independence at the end of 10 years may be achieved.

The tug-of-war at the Manila conference this summer will come between these opposing groups unless the line-up changes after the legislature convenes.

And the importance to the United States involved in the decision to be made at this midsummer conference arises from the fact that acceptance of this legislation would end all hope of any constructive solution of the Philippine problem.

By the terms of this legislation, should it be accepted, all relationship between the United States and the Philippines would be ended 10 or 12 years hence in a way that would injure economically the Philippine people, wound their sensibilities and precipitate serious unrest in the islands.

* * *

For the United States to abandon the Philippine Islands to their fate, destroy their chance to develop economic independence and leave them defenseless and alone would not make for peace in the Far East. It would discredit the prestige of the United States throughout that region, and no American farmer, sugar planter, rope manufacturer or wage-earner would benefit to the extent of a single dollar.

Both Gen. Aguinaldo and Senate President Quezon are well aware of the circumstances under which this dishonest Philippine bill became a law. Its main provisions were drafted by a sinister coalition of special interests.

This coalition was made up of American investors in Cuban sugar properties, American investors in domestic sugar properties, the sugar oligarchy of Honolulu, which rules in Hawaii, a combination of New England, Missouri and other cordage companies and some labor organizations on the Pacific coast.

Instead of giving immediate independence to the Philippines on honorable terms, it offers independence 10 or 12 years hence on terms that dishonor the United States and deal a knock-out blow to the economic life of the Philippine people.

Human Side of the News

Unrest in India Recalls Bloody Sepoy Mutiny of 75 Years Ago

By Edwin C. Hill

The stars hang low in the luminous African night. A thousand men, women and children sleep soundly in a native Galla village in the British territory of Kenya, in northeastern Africa. Off in a bush a lion looses a rumbling roar which jars the air. A jackal laughs in hysterical terror. The peaceful Gallas, familiar with such echoes of the night, sleep undisturbed.

Suddenly the echoes become a demoniac chorus. Over the village sweeps a wave of wild tribesmen from across the border in Abyssinia. The Galla men, rushing from their grass huts, half stupid from sleep, are mowed down by rifle fire and slaughtered with spears. The young men and the young women are seized and bound. The old are killed in blood-frenzy. And in the light of the burning town, the raiders from Ethiopia retreat swiftly back through the bush and are over the borders of their own country carrying their lifelong slavery the miserable Gallas.

British Lion Growls at Frequent Raids

These raids have been all too frequent in the past year, and the British Lion growls angrily at the "Lion" of Judah, none other than His Majesty the Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia. The mediaeval potentate, who claims to be descended straight from King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba, is told that he must keep his slave raiders on his own side of the Kenya border or there may be unpleasant consequences.

There are black crimes festering in the heart of the Dark Continent, in the blackest of all is human slavery, the bondage of men and women which "Bula Matari," Henry M. Stanley, fought so hard to suppress 50 years ago. Even the penalty of death does not daunt the heartless slave raiders who make their forays, massacre whole communities and drive away columns of manacled, staggering human cattle. It is one of the most terrible problems the British have to deal with in their spheres of control and influence, and quite recently the United States has had to speak plainly to its own dark stepchild, Liberia, on the west side of the great continent.

It is interesting to note that the airplane, which is changing human existence in so many ways may yet prove the instrument by which slavery in Africa will finally be wiped out. For the British are instituting airplane patrols of the regions that suffer from slave raids. Speedily as the raiders strike and retreat, they cannot outmarch the planes that spot them from the skies and pursue them with machine guns.

Continued unrest in India recalls the interesting fact that it is just three-quarters of a century since the Sepoy Mutiny took place, one of the most frightful experiences ever suffered by the white race in an alien land. The mutiny was a rebellion of the native troops, the Sepoys, against British authority in India. It was provoked by an incredible piece of stupidity.

A new rifle was served out to the native troops. The cartridges had to be greased to make them slide easily into the breech of the gun. The grease was cow's fat, something thoroughly detestable to both Mohammedan and Hindu soldiers. It was necessary for them to tear off the tops of the cartridges with their teeth. They got upon their lips the hated, loathsome cow's fat. It was, by their standards, an impurity which, deprived them of caste in this world and robbed them of their hope of heaven in the next.

Rebellion flamed through the great province of Bengal. Thousands of English men, women and children were butchered before the mutiny was crushed, dinally, in 1858. The Mutiny produced the massacre at Cawnpore, the siege of Delhi and the relief of Lucknow, Only a little more than a century when one reads of the indomitable valor of those British men and women who fought to the death against hordes of bloodthirsty natives. It was one of the frightful tragedies of humanity, with power after all these years to freeze the blood with its stories of the butchery of men and women, the cool heroism of men, the patient suffering and the gallant deeds of women, and the implacable fury with which the massacres and the butchery were avenged by Britain.

Thrilling Tale of British in India

The tale of the British in India is a long chronicle, and a thrilling one, beginning when the little John Company clerk, Robert Clive, suddenly found himself and became one of the ablest military leaders who ever led the Red Coats. For two centuries Great Britain has sent to India her best and her bravest. Perhaps the British Empire has been done to her remarkable work for a horde of 300,000,000 people, backward, steeped in superstition, enslaved by castle and divided into hundreds of hostile tribes and races.

Admitting that India has a right to freedom, with independence, one wonders what would happen if the strong hand of Great Britain should suddenly be removed. It is more than likely that a bloody religious war would follow, Mohammedans against the hated Hindus. But it is scarcely more likely that the British will voluntarily retire from their great Asiatic Empire than it is to expect that the descendants of the settlers in our own West would abandon the lands they wrested from the Indians by force and chicanery. The British title to India is almost as respectable as the American title to America.
